Repeated German Counterblows Fail To Halt Slashing Allied Offensive

Double Smash

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Nov. 29 (AP).—Striking with a fierce night attack, the veteran British Eighth Army has slammed into the enemy's main "winter line" defenses at two points across the Sangro River, gaining vantage points from which additional advances could make the entire Adriatic end of the German front untenable.

Fully aware of their peril, the Germans fought tenaciously to hold heights commanding the enlarged Allied bridgehead near the mouth of the Sangro, and just as bitterly to hold rising ground across the river from the village of Archi, 13 miles inland.

The weight of massed artillery, the daylong bombings by clouds of Allied planes and the driving onslaught of British and Indian troops were too much for the Nazis, however, and official reports said the attack near the coast made "good progress."

High Ground Seized

In the second bridgehead opposite Archi a day of heavy seesaw fighting ended with General Montgomery's warriors holding valued high ground on the northwest side of the river. It was disclosed this second crossing of the flooded Sangro was first achieved four days ago by the famous Seventy-eighth British Division, veterans of "Long Stop Hill" in Tunisia.

Repeated German counterattacks, with flame-throwing tanks in the van, failed to halt the offensive, but extremely heavy fighting continued. The possibility of the enemy rushing additional armored forces into the areas was seen in a report that Allied airmen had strafed tanks loaded on motor transporters in areas east of Rome.

The second thrust across the Sangro at Archi appeared to put the Eighth Army astride a lateral road which has been used by the Nazis to supply their elaborate defensive positions behind the river. This strategic highway is several miles back from the Sangro elsewhere, but opposite Archi it swings down into the river valley only a mile from the stream.

Fifth Moves Up

West of Venafro, American troops of Lieut.-Gen. Mark W. Clark's Fifth Army gained more high ground in a limited advance and broke up determined German counterattacks. A headquarters communique said "valuable information" was being gathered by Fifth Army patrols penetrating enemy territory.

The German air force, making its first appearance in strength over the battle lines in recent weeks, sent three formations of fighter-bombers against the advancing British troops, but each group was driven off by Spitfires.

American dive-bombers created what was officially reported as

Streamlined WPB Planned To Hurry War

By Ben W. Gilbert

The War Production Board is about to be reorganized to prepare it better for "quick shifts" in munitions programs which will be required by current and impending military operations to shorten the war, informed officials revealed yesterday.

The new "streamlined" WPB will thus be prepared better, in addition, for the even bigger "shifts" toward peacetime production that must come in the event of a sudden collapse of Nazi Germany, although officials emphasized that the primary objective was to hasten victory.

Main outlines of the reorganization were revealed by WPB Executive Vice Chairman Charles E. Wilson at a special staff meeting attended by heads of industry divisions, officials who were present disclosed.

Wilson informed them, it was learned, that he was taking over—in addition to his present duties,

Soldier Dies Of Rabies After Dogbite

A victim of hydrophobia, dread disease for which there is no cure once symptoms become apparent, Sergt. Harold L. Whitman, an M. P. stationed at the gate of the Army War College, died Saturday night, it was learned yesterday from the Health Department. He had had the Pasteur treatment.

Sergeant Whitman, 28, was bitten badly on the right hand by a stray dog, August 24. His wound was cauterized immediately, and the dog was taken to Health Department laboratories where it was tested and found to be rabid on the same day.

The day following he was sent to Walter Reed Hospital where he remained nearly three weeks, receiving the Pasteur treatment, and then returned to duty.

Last Tuesday, he became anxious, nervous and apprehensive and was transferred back to Walter Reed where he died. He was the son of

By Robert C. Albright

A favorable report to the Senate today of the Truman rail pay increase resolution was predicted last night following the apparent collapse of compromise negotiations.

A meeting of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee was called by Chairman Burton K. Wheeler to consider subcommittee recommendations that Congress grant the full 8-cent-an-hour flat increase to 1,097,000 nonoperating rail employes.

Members of the subcommittee, headed by Senator Edwin C. Johnson (Democrat) of Colorado, predicted the full committee will approve their report and send the Truman resolution to the Senate.

Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson has protested the bill will scrap the "Little Steel" formula and crash through the wage stabilization line, but the subcommittee statement denied this, contending the 8-cent award of the May 24 first emergency board met every requirement of the Railway Labor

Blood on Tarawa

Counted 105 Dead Marines In 20 Yards, Says General

By Joseph Driscoll

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Honolulu, T. H., Nov. 29.—How were the marines able to take Tarawa in 76 hours?

"Gentlemen, it was our will to die."

Thus, Maj. Gen. Holland McTiere Smith, commanding the landing forces, answered that question on his return here today.

That will to die was stronger than steel and flame. For—

"I counted 105 dead marines in a space of less than 20 yards," said the general.

"Gentlemen," he went on, "let me tell you a story of heroism. When a landing party goes to a beach it carries a flag to mark positions. For instance, the positions for ammunition, water and food. I saw one flag planted on the beach within 10 feet of an enemy machine gun. The marine fell with his flag. There was no question that carrying that flag had hampered the marine, but his orders were to plant it on the beach. He did.

"There is no way to make war safe and easy—at least, we haven't found it yet."

Then he answered criticism, reported to have been voiced in the United States, over failure of preparatory naval and air bombardment to knock out the Japanese blockhouses, which mowed down hundreds of marines wading through the water and up the beaches from small landing boats.

"These blockhouses," he said, "were prepared over a period of 15 months. In places they were of concrete 5 feet thick, with palm tree trunks 18 inches in diameter superimposed on the concrete. And superimposed on that were angle irons—made of railroad steel. Piled on top of that were from 10 to 12 feet of sand and coral rock.

Fortified for 15 Months

"Nothing but a direct hit of a 2000-pound bomb would cave in or destroy those blockhouses. A number of them stood up against the sky. Every one of them was hit by some solid projectile, but they were practically indestructible, except from inside.

"I counted many dead marines within 3 feet of machinegun emplacements and within 20 yards of twin mounts of 40-millimeter guns which they had charged."

War correspondents, thinking of the Japanese held Marshall and Caroline Islands, including the great base at Truk, asked him if he expected to encounter similar difficulties in future operations.

"You must remember that Tarawa was seized by the Japanese after this war began, which meant approximately 15 months of preparations for us. There are other islands which the Japanese have been fortifying for 20 years." (The Marshalls and Carolines were mandated to the Japanese after the last war.)

When it was suggested that the islands which have been fortified during 20 years might be impregnable, Smith smiled grimly and said:

"Well, the Japs said Tarawa was impregnable. They told the natives that, and said the Americans would never take it."

General Smith has a misleading grandfatherly appearance. A round, little man with silver spectacles and wispy gray hair, and mustache, he has the reputation of a supertough fighting man. His deep voice has earned him the nickname of "Howling Hollie."

"The Tarawa fight was tougher than Guadalcanal or Belleau Wood or anything in Marine Corps history," he said.

Pickett's charge at Gettysburg would be the closest comparison in concentrated carnage. Asked if the Battle of New Orleans would compare with Tarawa, he snorted:

Yanks Batter Bremen Again; 31 Planes Lost

London, Nov. 29 (AP).—Streaking through 65-below-zero weather, U. S. Flying Fortresses with powerful fighter escort continued the mighty new aerial offensive against Hitler's Europe today by heaping more destruction on the German port of Bremen in the second such daylight assault in four days.

In the attack on Bremen, which suffered a terrific pounding Friday by a record number of U. S. big planes, and other European targets during the day, 13 American heavy bombers and 18 fighter planes—16 of the latter American—were reported missing, while 35 Nazi aircraft were shot down.

An indication that the RAF was permitting no slack in the new aerial drive came tonight when the Nazi-dominated radio stations at Bremen, Friesland, Hilversum, Calais and Luxembourg faded from the air.

Berlin Station Silent

Deutschlandsender, the big Nazi station in the Berlin area, also went silent, indicating the RAF again might be blasting smoking Berlin, which was about one-third demolished in last week's night RAF attacks.

Under clouds of Thunderbolts and Lightnings, the Flying Fortresses made the 800-mile round trip to Bremen in tempeartures dipping as low as 65 degrees below zero, the coldest weather in which American high-altitude bombers ever have operated from Britain.

Bremen, a city of 340,000 normal population and a port second in importance only to Hamburg, has been attacked six times by the Eighth Air Force.

Meanwhile, RAF Typhoon bombers with a Typhoon escort streaked

Tom Harmon Is Reported Found Safe

U. S. Fourteenth Air Force Headquarters in China, Nov. 29 (AP).—Lieut. Tommy Harmon, fighter pilot of Michigan football fame recently reported missing, is safe, it was announced today.

Harmon, All-American in 1939 and 1940, was lost on a dive-bombing attack on Kiukiang, a Yangtze River port, on October 30, when four U. S. Lightning planes were shot down in combat with Japanese Zeros.

It was the second time the former All-America halfback had been reported missing. Last April a bomber he was piloting was disabled in a rainstorm over French Guiana, and the six-man crew bailed out.

Harmon was saved after slashing through the jungle until he met natives who guided him to a settlement, and he credited his athletic training with helping him sur-

Surrender Ultimatum Reported Sent to Nazi Army by 'Big 3'

By Horace M. Coats

International News Service Staff Writer

President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin may issue jointly an unconditional surrender ultimatum directly to the Germany army, in the opinion of well-informed diplomatic circles.

They said the ultimatum already may have been advanced, although they thought it more likely the "Big Three" would deliver it to the German army and the German people—not to Hitler and his gang of war lords—after the Allied leaders have met.

Terms of the ultimatum, it was predicted, may take the following pattern:

1. Acceptance by the German army high command of unconditional surrender and an agreement to lay down arms.

2. Depose Hitler, Himmler, Goebbels and other top-flight Nazi leaders, and place them under arrest for delivery to the United Nations for trial and punishment.

3. Designate a commission to arrange an armistice with the United Nations, including procedure for immediate withdrawal of the German army and satellite armies from occupied states.

4. Refusal to accept any of these conditions to be followed by destruction of every major German industrial city by air bombardment, with invasion of continental Europe soon to follow.

State Department officials declined to comment, and pointed out their declination to discuss it

Russian-Czech Pact Recognizes Poland

Nation Designated As Postwar Bar to German Aggression

London, Nov. 29 (AP).—The Russians and Czechs, in a mutual assistance pact to be signed in the next few days, will open the door for Poland to join in a barricade against Germany's "drang nach osten" (drive to the east) for the next 20 years, it was learned tonight.

The pact also, in effect, disclaims any Soviet intention to bolshevize the smaller European countries.

A protocol—patterned after the British-Soviet treaty signed in 1942—says it can be joined by any of the neighbors of Czechoslovakia or Russia which are not Allies of Germany. Poland is virtually the only country falling definitely in this category.

The terms of the treaty pledge a finish fight against Hitlerite Germany and provide for rebuilding of postwar Europe on a basis of nonintervention in internal affairs of the nations. The treaty makes no mention of territorial boundaries.

This was omitted for two reasons:

1. The Russians never have recognized the Munich concessions to Germany.

2. The United States and Britain have insisted that boundary discussions be postponed until the end of the war.

A plank emphasizing that there shall be no intervention in internal affairs of the countries involved is regarded here as establishing a principle for Soviet relations with all the smaller countries with whom they might conclude treaties.

The pact, which will be signed in Moscow in the next few days by Edouard Benes, president of the provisional Czech government, will be a corollary of bigger pronouncements expected to come out of a meeting of President Roosevelt, Premier Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill.

Officers' Delight

Laraine Day Puts in Word For G. I. Joe

Hollywood, Nov. 29 (AP).—Home from a three weeks' tour of Army camps, filme actress Laraine Day said today she had just one complaint—she saw altogether too much gold braid and too many brass hats, and not enough plain G. I. khaki.

Her time was monopolized by officers ranging from captains to generals, she declared in a report to the Hollywood Victory Committee, and she got scant opportunity to carry out what she considered her mission—"to bring some measure of entertainment, fun and cheer to the privates and noncoms."

The brown-haired acress, whose husband, Ray Hendricks, is an Army private, said she was especially embarassed when a "bevy of gold-bedecked gentlemen took me through the camp hospital."

"We walked into a ward, and the major called 'Attention.' Every man who could jumped out of bed in his nightshirt and stood stiffly by his bed. I'm sure those boys will never forgive me."

"It's a difficult task trying to carry on a friendly conversation with a couple of buck privates when a colonel is standing at your elbow. I am sure I could hear some of them saying, 'Who does that high-hat dame think she is?' "

The next time she goes out, Miss Day said, "I want to eat G. I. food, not thick steaks washed down with champagne in the officers' clubs."

Actress Ann Sothern said she took no chances on her recent tour.

"The first thing I would tell the special service officers when I arrived at a camp," she declared today "was that I had come to entertain the enlisted personnel, and that teas and dinner parties in the officers' clubs were out. So with everything understood right at the start I had no trouble."

Dr. Pugh to Speak To Men's League After World Tour

The Rev. Dr. William Barrow Pugh, chairman of the National Council of the Service Men's Christian League, who returned here last week after a 48,000-mile tour of the fighting fronts, will speak at the annual meeting of the league at noon today at the Willard Hotel.

Dr. Pugh, who was the representative of the Protestant churches of America on his recent journey, completed the mission started by the late Bishop Adna W. Leonard, who was killed in an airplane crash in Iceland last May.

Other principal speakers at the luncheon today will be Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox; Col. George F. Rixey, United States Army Deputy Chief of Chaplains, who accompanied Dr. Pugh; Capt. Robert D. Workman, Chief of Navy Chaplains and Col. Harry C. Fraser, of the Office of the Chief of Chaplains of the United States Army.

Army Medium Bomber Now Carries Deadly 75-mm. Cannon

By John G. Norris

Development of an important new aerial weapon—a twin-engined bomber carrying a 75-millimeter cannon—was announced yesterday by the War Department.

Secretly perfected by the Army Air Force and North American Aviation Corp., the artillery carrying planes have already seen action in the South Pacific "and probably other theaters" of war, it was said.

Officials said the B-25 Mitchell bombers equipped with a modification of the famous "French 75"—the basic field artillery weapon of Allied armies in the last war—are proving especially effective against small Japanese ships in the Pacific, though they have other important uses.

"First use of the cannon-firing B-25 was against the Japanese in New Guinea, when 't joined in action against a Japanese . - transport, which was destroyed as it made a landing," said the announcement.

"Stalking larger game in the same area, the B-25 was sent against the larger of two Japanese destroyers. Five direct hits were scored and the warship was left in a sinking condition.

"The B-25 with cannon has been employed in attacking land installations and making forays at sea against Axis shipping.

"Action by the heavily armed plane has been extended to include gun emplacements, landing barges and tanks."

Cannon have been in general use in airplanes throughout the war but the installation on the B-25 is by far the largest weapon yet mounted in a plane. The British Hurricanes and the Russian Stormoviks have used 40-mm. cannon with great effect against tanks as well as other targets.

The largest cannon used heretofor in an American warplane has been the 37-mm. which has been employed in some versions of both the Bell P-39 Airacobra and the P-38 Lightning. The majority of fighter planes, both Axis and Allied, use 20-mm. cannon in addition to machine guns.

"Despite the size of the new Army Air Forces combat weapon, it has not decreased the effectiveness of the B-25 in dropping bombs, strafing, carrying torpedoes, acting as reconnaissance planes, transports and as fighters," the Army said.

The 75-mm. cannon—together with two .50 caliber machine guns—replace the bombardier's compartment in the nose of the Mitchells. A cannoneer takes the place of the bombardier and loads the gun, but the pilot charges and fires the weapon. Apparently he also releases the bombs. The new nose is armor-plated.

Greatest difficulty encountered in putting such a heavy weapon on a plane was that of recoil. North American developed a secret type of recoil mechanism which almost eliminates the "kick" of the .75.

should not be construed as giving color to its accuracy.

The suggestion that the "big three" would address jointly an ultimatum to the German army and people rather than to Hitler was considered logical in view of oft repeated assertions by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill that they want possession of Hitler and his chief conspirators for just punishment.

Therefore, it was reasoned, spokesmen for Germany other than Hitler, et al., would have to come forward to receive the unconditional surrender terms and conditions that will flow from them. These would include evacuation of invaded states and subjection to Allied control of Germany until that country has set up a government with which the world can live.

Should Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin submit an ultimatum to the German army, it was pointed out, they would be following the course pursued in eliminating Mussolini in Italy. The unconditional surrender of Italy was worked out with others than the former dictator.

Early News Expected

London, Nov. 29 (AP).—A declaration of epochal importance involving a possible demand for Germany's surrender and signed by President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin in the first meeting of the "big three" is expected—on the basis of foreign reports—to be announced within a few days.

Reports have persisted that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek has joined in the conference, but it is believed he probably would participate only in talks apart from those attended by the Russians, who are not fighting Japan.

The Nazi-controlled Vichy radio said tonight "according to neutral reports reaching Vichy, Roosevelt and Churchill have arrived in Cairo and Stalin, on his way to Egypt, has reached Teheran. The meeting of the three statesmen will take place in the next few days, either in Cairo or Alexandria."

There were reports, too, that President Eduard Benes of the Czechoslovak government in exile was attending.

It is taken for granted in London that they would join in reaffirming the unconditional surrender policy, and elaborate it with a statement to the German people of the treatment they might expect if they aid in shortening the war by throwing out the Nazis.

Although the Allied powers apparently have agreed on a strategy of an all-out assault on Germany in the spring, military as well as diplomatic consultations are believed involved.

The highest-ranking military figures are expected to attend any such meeting. On the diplomatic side, President Roosevelt's party likely would include Undersecretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, jr., as well as Harry Hopkins, chairman of the British-American Munitions Assignment Board; W. Averell Harriman, Ambassador to Russia, and John G. Winant, Ambassador to Britain.

The big three might be able only to exchange views on some political problems in postwar Europe, postponing their decisions until the European Advisory Commission can make studies and recommendations.

One such problem is reparations. The Soviet government economist, Professor Vargas, has proposed that Britain take over German assets abroad, while Russia takes German goods, machines, raw materials and several million workers for reconstruction of the Soviet areas devastated by war. Roosevelt and Churchill may want Stalin's views on this before deciding their own attitude.

If Benes is attending the conference, his advice on the future political structure of Germany and central and eastern Europe would be available before he goes to Moscow to sign a mutual assistance treaty between Russia and Czechoslovakia.

Renewed rumors of German peace feelers are strongly discredited by high British quarters.

A second emergency board finding, indorsed by Vinson, awarded pay increases ranging from 10 cents an hour for lower paid workers to 4 cents an hour for the higher paid groups, but this was rejected by railway workers and a strike vote is in progress.

Leadership efforts to compromise on a possible 7 to 10 cent sliding scale have reached a temporary impasse. In one quarter it was said compromise efforts might later be resumed at the White House.

Senator Truman, (Democrat) of Missouri, Senate author, claims the votes to pass the bill through the Senate, while Representative Crosser, (Decocrat) of Ohio, House sponsor, has predicted the House will passit "hands down."

out to blast the enemy airfield at Moorsel, Belgium, and attacked enemy shipping off Brest, while Mosquitos delivered a stinging, low-level attack on a railway center in northwest Germany, setting fire to at least one minesweeper.

American Maurauders, with RAF, Dominion and Allied Spitfires running their interference, blasted an enemy airfield at Chivres, southwest of Brussels. The Marauders shot down five Nazi fighter planes and the Spitfires knocked out five more.

The daylight attacks followed raids by RAF Mosquitos last night on western Germany and minelaying operations, in which no planes were lost. The objectives in Germany were not identified. Bomber crewmen, some of whom were frostbitten, said the bombers and their powerful escort of Thunderbolts and Lightnings met only light anti-aircraft fire. Some Nazi fighters flitted into sight just before the bomb-run, they added, but were scattered by the guns of the escorts.

13 Nurses, 12 Soldiers Lost in Plane

The War Department announced yesterday that 13 Army nurses and 12 soldiers, all passengers on an Army transport flying from North Africa to Italy, have been missing since November 8.

(Allied headquarters at Algiers reported earlier that the plane overshot its destination in bad weather and the last word from the craft was received while it presumably was over the Adriatic.)

The nurses were:

Inspector Smith Named Assistant Superintendent

Inspector Milton D. Smith, officer in charge of the Metropolitan Police uniforms, equipment and property, has been promoted to the grade of assistant superintendent at a salary of $5000, the District Commissioners announced yesterday. The promotion is effective on and after December 1.

Inspector Smith said yesterday that the promotion came to him as a surprise. He said Maj. Edward J. Kelly called him in shortly after noon and told him the office had been created last Friday when the Commissioners recognized the tremendous growth of his division. Up to this time there have been only two assistant superintendents. Inspector Smith makes the third, sharing honors with Inspectors Harvey Callahan and Robert Barrett.

Inspector Smith joined the police force as a private in December, 1918. He served as a captain in the traffic division for nine years prior to his promotion to inspector in August, 1941.

Uprisings in Cities Recently Bombed Discussed on Radio

Riots Reported

London, Nov. 29 (AP).—The Cairo radio said today that riots had occurred in bomb-ravaged Duesseldorf, Cologne, Hannover and Hamburg and many persons were killed when SS troops fired on the crowds.

Bern, Switzerland, Nov. 29 (AP). Nazi-controlled reports of the havoc wrought on Germany's economic life and the morale of her population by Allied air attacks are only a shadow of the real thing, a writer in the Swiss weekly L'Illustre said today in an article entitled "I return from Berlin."

He wrote this description of Berliners' state of mind before the recent mass attacks:

"Speak to any of them alone end men, women and children say they have had enough of hunger and suffering and orders, of being kept ignorant of the future, of renouncing all pleasures, of living almost like beasts, or being no longer like human beings.

"They tell you they are well aware the war is lost. But they also say they can do nothing against authority because every rebellion, every criticism, even every sign of passive resistance is severly punished.

"Thousands of SS men (Hitler's Elite Guards) ceaselessly patrol the city. Every building head is instructed to spy on the occupants."

Before the great new attacks more than a million Germans already had lost their homes, furnishings and clothing, becoming proletarian "'have nothings" from one day to the next, the writer said.

Hitler's National Socialist "catastrophe squads" were straining to remove people from Berlin and other heavily-bombed centers lest they contribute even more to the collapse of the home front. The greater part of these have lost one, two or three members of their families.

Hitler Fears Worst

London, Nov. 29 (AP).—The Berlin radio broadcast today a speech it said was made by Hitler nine days ago in which he told 2000 young officers that "the nation that loses this war will cease to exist."

"In this struggle only one ideology can win," he was quoted as saying. "The other will be destroyed mercilessly."

"It would be madness to expect from this struggle anything but victory or annihilation." Hitler was quoted as saying in the speech, made before the RAF began its big-scale destruction of Berlin.

In contrast with his previous statements that Providence had helped Germany, the broadcast said:

"As so often in the past, so today Providence will bestow no gifts on our nation in its struggle for freedom and its future."

Raising the possibility of German defeat, Hitler asserted that if the Allies won "then the barbarity of the steppes would sweep across the continent and destroy it as the base and source of human culture."

Navy Takes Over Section Of Remington-Rand Plant

By the Associated Press

The Navy yesterday took over operations of a section of the Remington-Rand Co.'s Elmira plant at Southport, N. Y., in what is termed an effort to step up production and improve the quality of precision instrument parts manufactured there.

The White House first disclosed seizure of the "N" division of the plant, and the Navy subsequently explained, without giving reasons, that the factory's production was lagging "far behind schedule" and was of unsatisfactory quality. Its product was described as "an important war item."

Plant Owned by Navy

The plant, operated by the company under Navy contract, has been turning out parts used by Carl L. Norden, Inc., New York City, manufacturer of bombsights and other precision instruments used by the armed forces.

Most of the buildings and all of the tools and equipment at the factory are owned by the Navy.

Rear Admiral Harold G. Bowen, special assistant to the Undersecretary of the Navy, was placed in charge of the division and the Norden firm was designated as manufacturing agent for the Navy. Wages and other working conditions, the Navy said, will remain unchanged.

President Roosevelt's executive order directing the Secretary of the Navy to take possession of the facilities stipulated that the plant will be turned back to the company within 60 days after the President determines that it "will be operated privately in a manner consistent with the war effort."

In New York Remington issued the following statement:

"Remington-Rand is concerned at this time only with production to win the war. Its 'N' division plant has made an outstanding contribution to solution of a most difficult war production problem.

"The published assertion that production has been of an 'unacceptable quality' is manifestly unfair, since 95 per cent of the production has been passed and accepted by the naval inspectors for the Navy Department.

"The inference that the plant is behind schedule is likewise unjust as there has never been a schedule described in the contract. Regardless of who receives the final credit, Remington-Rand has pledged the Navy Department the fullest cooperation of its entire organization."

Price Posting Order Is Granted to OPA

OPA was granted an injunction in District Court yesterday to prevent Shankman's Market, 400 Kennedy st. nw., from violating OPA price posting regulations.

In the injunction suit filed last September, OPA charged that ceiling prices had not been posted in the meat department of the market, operated by Louis and Nathan Shankman.

Coal Price Increases by OPA Are Unsatisfactory to Owners

The Office of Price Administration yesterday released a detailed schedule of soft coal price increases which operators promptly branded as unsatisfactory, raising the possibility that some, if not all, of the Nation's coal mines, might be left in Government hands for the duration of the war.

Providing an average boost of 17 cents a ton to pay the cost of the wage agreement signed by Interior Secretary Harold L. Ickes and United Mine Worker President John L. Lewis for the duration of Government operation, the schedule denied any boost to coal producers in western Kentucky, Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, Kansas, northern Oklahoma, Texas and northern Colorado.

Increases Authorized

Increases up to 30 cents a ton were granted to major producing districts with increases up to 50 cents a ton in minor Western districts. Small adjustments were authorized for some mines in districts where a general boost was denied.

J. B. Morrow, president of the Pittsburgh Coal Co., second largest commercial producer in the industry, declared that the schedule would "result in decreased production of coal in western Pennsylvania."

Morrow contended that other districts with lower production costs received more favorable treatment.

Most immediate effect was expected to be a further delay in wage negotiations between the operators and United Mine Workers to facilitate return of the mines to their owners.

Ickes Talks at Parley

Ickes appeared before the coal parley yesterday and urged the conferees to try to reach a speedy settlement. It was reported that he blasted the Southern Appalachian coal operators for their failure to agree to sign a contract with Lewis based on the Ickes-Lewis pact. Other operators have agreed to do so.

Without mentioning the Southern group by name, Ickes said that one group of operators never had any intention of signing a contract since negotiations began.

Edward R. Brke, former Senator, spokesman for the Southern group, replied that his group was perfectly willing to sign a contract provided it was within the stabilization program. Burke asserted that the Ickes-Lewis agreement would be rejected by the War Labor Board if submitted by operators and miners to govern private operation.

Ickes was said to have retorted that was a matter for the War Labor Board to decide, and that the group ought to negotiate a contract and submit it to WLB to see what happens.

Operators Skeptical

The price regulation made provision for special adjustments to protect high cost producers, but operators revealed skepticism about the value of this feature of the new ceiling.

Some operators said that they were prepared to leave their mines in Government hands until OPA changed its mind and granted higher prices, with the idea of settling up in the Court of Claims after the war. Other operators hinted that they might permit the Government to return their mines and then shut down the high cost operations until a satisfactory price increase was granted.

Authorized by Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson last Saturday, the increases, which OPA said "can be passed on to domestic consumers at once, follow:

New Way to Handle Payrolls

Conserves Hours of Precious Time

"TIME is the measure of business, as money is of wares." So said the great Francis Bacon three hundred years ago.

Today, under the increasing strains of war, time is not only the measure of business—it is the most critical material we possess. And the measure of American genius is its ability to create more time by finding quicker, better ways to forge a shell, mold a plastic, harvest a crop, or handle a payroll.

▲ FOR INSTANCE—this week many offices will produce today's complex payroll records in one-half the time formerly consumed. This despite the new "load" added by the Withholding Tax.

▲ THE REASON—a new payroll plan by Shaw-Walker automatically transfers each figure to the several essential records.

After writing payroll figures just once, every record needed is completed, correct and up-to-date—ready for quarterly reports and government inspection. Rewriting of figures is entirely eliminated.

Entirely eliminated, too, are separate records for War Bonds, Social Security, Withholding Tax, employee insurance, employee hospitalization, union dues and all other ledger records of a similar nature.

Every pay day the statement you give to each employee includes:

(1) A complete record of earnings.

(2) A detailed list of deductions.

(3) A notice telling the worker the exact amount he has on deposit with you toward his next War Bond.

ALL MADE AT ONE WRITING: pay checks, employee pay statement, social security and withholding tax record, War Bond Record, ledger record of other deductions, check register and payroll summary.

▲ SO SIMPLE is the "KOPI-SPOT" payroll system that any clerk can handle it. It can be adapted to any type of payroll whether you pay by check or in cash—whether you make your entries by typewriter or by hand.

▲ A COMPLETE FOLDER has been prepared, illustrating the "KOPI-SPOT" and explaining its application to various payroll methods. May we send you a copy of it?

FOR THE DURATION any old file will do—it's the system itself that counts!

AFTER THE WAR transfer the system intact to any of the following:

A SHAW-WALKER FIRE FILE—the steel file with built-in fire protection. It gives safe-like security, even in severe fires.

OR THE DRAWERS of the Shaw-Walker steel desk. This is the famous new low desk for comfort and hard work.

Russian-Czech Pact Recognizes Poland

Nation Designated As Postwar Bar to German Aggression

London, Nov. 29 (AP).—The Russians and Czechs, in a mutual assistance pact to be signed in the next few days, will open the door for Poland to join in a barricade against Germany's "drang nach osten" (drive to the east) for the next 20 years, it was learned tonight.

The pact also, in effect, disclaims any Soviet intention to bolshevize the smaller European countries.

A protocol—patterned after the British-Soviet treaty signed in 1942—says it can be joined by any of the neighbors of Czechoslovakia or Russia which are not Allies of Germany. Poland is virtually the only country falling definitely in this category.

The terms of the treaty pledge a finish fight against Hitlerite Germany and provide for rebuilding of postwar Europe on a basis of nonintervention in internal affairs of the nations. The treaty makes no mention of territorial boundaries.

This was omitted for two reasons:

1. The Russians never have recognized the Munich concessions to Germany.

2. The United States and Britain have insisted that boundary discussions be postponed until the end of the war.

A plank emphasizing that there shall be no intervention in internal affairs of the countries involved is regarded here as establishing a principle for Soviet relations with all the smaller countries with whom they might conclude treaties.

The pact, which will be signed in Moscow in the next few days by Edouard Benes, president of the provisional Czech government, will be a corollary of bigger pronouncements expected to come out of a meeting of President Roosevelt, Premier Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill.

Officers' Delight

Laraine Day Puts in Word For G. I. Joe

Hollywood, Nov. 29 (AP).—Home from a three weeks' tour of Army camps, filme actress Laraine Day said today she had just one complaint—she saw altogether too much gold braid and too many brass hats, and not enough plain G. I. khaki.

Her time was monopolized by officers ranging from captains to generals, she declared in a report to the Hollywood Victory Committee, and she got scant opportunity to carry out what she considered her mission—"to bring some measure of entertainment, fun and cheer to the privates and noncoms."

The brown-haired acress, whose husband, Ray Hendricks, is an Army private, said she was especially embarassed when a "bevy of gold-bedecked gentlemen took me through the camp hospital."

"We walked into a ward, and the major called 'Attention.' Every man who could jumped out of bed in his nightshirt and stood stiffly by his bed. I'm sure those boys will never forgive me."

"It's a difficult task trying to carry on a friendly conversation with a couple of buck privates when a colonel is standing at your elbow. I am sure I could hear some of them saying, 'Who does that high-hat dame think she is?'"

The next time she goes out, Miss Day said, "I want to eat G. I. food, not thick steaks washed down with champagne in the officers' clubs."

Actress Ann Sothern said she took no chances on her recent tour.

"The first thing I would tell the special service officers when I arrived at a camp," she declared today "was that I had come to entertain the enlisted personnel, and that teas and dinner parties in the officers' clubs were out. So with everything understood right at the start I had no trouble."

Dr. Pugh to Speak To Men's League After World Tour

The Rev. Dr. William Barrow Pugh, chairman of the National Council of the Service Men's Christian League, who returned here last week after a 48,000-mile tour of the fighting fronts, will speak at the annual meeting of the league at noon today at the Willard Hotel.

Dr. Pugh, who was the representative of the Protestant churches of America on his recent journey, completed the mission started by the late Bishop Adna W. Leonard, who was killed in an airplane crash in Iceland last May.

Other principal speakers at the luncheon today will be Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox; Col. George F. Rixey, United States Army Deputy Chief of Chaplains, who accompanied Dr. Pugh; Capt. Robert D. Workman, Chief of Navy Chaplains and Col. Harry C. Fraser, of the Office of the Chief of Chaplains of the United States Army.

Army Medium Bomber Now Carries Deadly 75-mm. Cannon

By John G. Norris

Development of an important new aerial weapon—a twin-engined bomber carrying a 75-millimeter cannon—was announced yesterday by the War Department.

Secretly perfected by the Army Air Force and North American Aviation Corp., the artillery carrying planes have already seen action in the South Pacific "and probably other theaters" of war, it was said.

Officials said the B-25 Mitchell bombers equipped with a modification of the famous "French 75"—the basic field artillery weapon of Allied armies in the last war—are proving especially effective against small Japanese ships in the Pacific, though they have other important uses.

"First use of the cannon-firing B-25 was against the Japanese in New Guinea, when it joined in action against a Japanese . . . transport, which was destroyed as it made a landing," said the announcement.

"Stalking larger game in the same area, the B-25 was sent against the larger of two Japanese destroyers. Five direct hits were scored and the warship was left in a sinking condition.

"The B-25 with cannon has been employed in attacking land installations and making forays at sea against Axis shipping.

"Action by the heavily armed plane has been extended to include gun emplacements, landing barges and tanks."

Cannon have been in general use in airplanes throughout the war but the installation on the B-25 is by far the largest weapon yet mounted in a plane. The British Hurricanes and the Russian Stormoviks have used 40-mm. cannon with great effect against tanks as well as other targets.

The largest cannon used heretofor in an American warplane has been the 37-mm. which has been employed in some versions of both the Bell P-39 Airacobra and the P-38 Lightning. The majority of fighter planes, both Axis and Allied, use 20-mm. cannon in addition to machine guns.

"Despite the size of the new Army Air Forces combat weapon, it has not decreased the effectiveness of the B-25 in dropping bombs, strafing, carrying torpedoes, acting as reconnaissance planes, transports and as fighters," the Army said.

The 75-mm. cannon—together with two .50 caliber machine guns—replace the bombardier's compartment in the nose of the Mitchells. A cannoneer takes the place of the bombardier and loads the gun, but the pilot charges and fires the weapon. Apparently he also releases the bombs. The new nose is armor-plated.

Greatest difficulty encountered in putting such a heavy weapon on a plane was that of recoil. North American developed a secret type of recoil mechanism which almost eliminates the "kick" of the .75.

should not be construed as giving color to its accuracy.

The suggestion that the "big three" would address jointly an ultimatum to the German army and people rather than to Hitler was considered logical in view of oft repeated assertions by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill that they want possession of Hitler and his chief conspirators for just punishment.

Therefore, it was reasoned, spokesmen for Germany other than Hitler, et al., would have to come forward to receive the unconditional surrender terms and conditions that will flow from them. These would include evacuation of invaded states and subjection to Allied control of Germany until that country has set up a government with which the world can live.

Should Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin submit an ultimatum to the German army, it was pointed out, they would be following the course pursued in eliminating Mussolini in Italy. The unconditional surrender of Italy was worked out with others than the former dictator.

Early News Expected

London, Nov. 29 (AP).—A declaration of epochal importance involving a possible demand for Germany's surrender and signed by President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin in the first meeting of the "big three" is expected—on the basis of foreign reports—to be announced within a few days.

Reports have persisted that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek has joined in the conference, but it is believed he probably would participate only in talks apart from those attended by the Russians, who are not fighting Japan.

The Nazi-controlled Vichy radio said tonight "according to neutral reports reaching Vichy, Roosevelt and Churchill have arrived in Cairo and Stalin, on his way to Egypt, has reached Teheran. The meeting of the three statesmen will take place in the next few days, either in Cairo or Alexandria."

There were reports, too, that President Eduard Benes of the Czechoslovak government in exile was attending.

It is taken for granted in London that they would join in reaffirming the unconditional surrender policy, and elaborate it with a statement to the German people of the treatment they might expect if they aid in shortening the war by throwing out the Nazis.

Although the Allied powers apparently have agreed on a strategy of an all-out assault on Germany in the spring, military as well as diplomatic consultations are believed involved.

The highest-ranking military figures are expected to attend any such meeting. On the diplomatic side, President Roosevelt's party likely would include Undersecretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, jr., as well as Harry Hopkins, chairman of the British-American Munitions Assignment Board; W. Averell Harriman, Ambassador to Russia, and John G. Winant, Ambassador to Britain.

The big three might be able only to exchange views on some political problems in postwar Europe, postponing their decisions until the European Advisory Commission can make studies and recommendations.

One such problem is reparations. The Soviet government economist, Professor Vargas, has proposed that Britain take over German assets abroad, while Russia takes German goods, machines, raw materials and several million workers for reconstruction of the Soviet areas devastated by war. Roosevelt and Churchill may want Stalin's views on this before deciding their own attitude.

If Benes is attending the conference, his advice on the future political structure of Germany and central and eastern Europe would be available before he goes to Moscow to sign a mutual assistance treaty between Russia and Czechoslovakia.

Renewed rumors of German peace feelers are strongly discredited by high British quarters.

A second emergency board finding, indorsed by Vinson, awarded pay increases ranging from 10 cents an hour for lower paid workers to 4 cents an hour for the higher paid groups, but this was rejected by railway workers and a strike vote is in progress.

Leadership efforts to compromise on a possible 7 to 10 cent sliding scale have reached a temporary impasse. In one quarter it was said compromise efforts might later be resumed at the White House.

Senator Truman, (Democrat) of Missouri, Senate author, claims the votes to pass the bill through the Senate, while Representative Crosser, (Decocrat) of Ohio, House sponsor, has predicted the House will passit "hands down."

out to blast the enemy airfield at Moorsel, Belgium, and attacked enemy shipping off Brest, while Mosquitos delivered a stinging, low-level attack on a railway center in northwest Germany, setting fire to at least one minesweeper.

American Maurauders, with RAF, Dominion and Allied Spitfires running their interference, blasted an enemy airfield at Chivres, southwest of Brussels. The Marauders shot down five Nazi fighter planes and the Spitfires knocked out five more.

The daylight attacks followed raids by RAF Mosquitos last night on western Germany and minelaying operations, in which no planes were lost. The objectives in Germany were not identified. Bomber crewmen, some of whom were frostbitten, said the bombers and their powerful escort of Thunderbolts and Lightnings met only light anti-aircraft fire. Some Nazi fighters flitted into sight just before the bomb-run, they added, but were scattered by the guns of the escorts.

13 Nurses, 12 Soldiers Lost in Plane

The War Department announced yesterday that 13 Army nurses and 12 soldiers, all passengers on an Army transport flying from North Africa to Italy, have been missing since November 8.

(Allied headquarters at Algiers reported earlier that the plane overshot its destination in bad weather and the last word from the craft was received while it presumably was over the Adriatic.)

The nurses were:

Second Lieuts. Gertrude G. Dawson, Vandergrift, Pa.; Agnes A. Jensen, Stanwood, Mich.; Pauleen J. Kanable, Richland Center, Wis.; Ann E. Kopsco, Hammond, La.; Wilma D. Lytle, Butler, Ky.; Ava A. London, Nov. 29 (INS).—An Axis broadcast was quoted tonight as stating Pope Pius XII is expected to issue a call for a 48-hour "armistice" over the Christmas weekend.

Earlier, the German overseas agency said the Pope will broadcast a message to the world on Christmas Eve.

Inspector Smith Named Assistant Superintendent

Inspector Milton D. Smith, officer in charge of the Metropolitan Police uniforms, equipment and property, has been promoted to the grade of assistant superintendent at a salary of $5000, the District Commissioners announced yesterday. The promotion is effective on and after December 1.

Inspector Smith said yesterday that the promotion came to him as a surprise. He said Maj. Edward J. Kelly called him in shortly after noon and told him the office had been created last Friday when the Commissioners recognized the tremendous growth of his division. Up to this time there have been only two assistant superintendents. Inspector Smith makes the third, sharing honors with Inspectors Harvey Callahan and Robert Barrett.

Inspector Smith joined the police force as a private in December, 1918. He served as a captain in the traffic division for nine years prior to his promotion to inspector in August, 1941.

Uprisings in Cities Recently Bombed Discussed on Radio

Riots Reported

London, Nov. 29 (AP).—The Cairo radio said today that riots had occurred in bomb-ravaged Duesseldorf, Cologne, Hannover and Hamburg and many persons were killed when SS troops fired on the crowds.

Bern, Switzerland, Nov. 29 (AP). Nazi-controlled reports of the havoc wrought on Germany's economic life and the morale of her population by Allied air attacks are only a shadow of the real thing, a writer in the Swiss weekly L'Illustre said today in an article entitled "I return from Berlin."

He wrote this description of Berliners' state of mind before the recent mass attacks:

"Speak to any of them alone and men, women and children say they have had enough of hunger and suffering and orders, of being kept ignorant of the future, of renouncing all pleasures, of living almost like beasts, or being no longer like human beings.

"They tell you they are well aware the war is lost. But they also say they can do nothing against authority because every rebellion, every criticism, even every sign of passive resistance is severly punished.

"Thousands of SS men (Hitler's Elite Guards) ceaselessly patrol the city. Every building head is instructed to spy on the occupants."

Before the great new attacks more than a million Germans already had lost their homes, furnishings and clothing, becoming proletarian "'have nothings" from one day to the next, the writer said.

Hitler's National Socialist "catastrophe squads" were straining to remove people from Berlin and other heavily-bombed centers lest they contribute even more to the collapse of the home front. The greater part of these have lost one, two or three members of their families.

Hitler Fears Worst

London, Nov. 29 (AP).—The Berlin radio broadcast today a speech it said was made by Hitler nine days ago in which he told 2000 young officers that "the nation that loses this war will cease to exist."

"In this struggle only one ideology can win," he was quoted as saying. "The other will be destroyed mercilessly."

"It would be madness to expect from this struggle anything but victory or annihilation," Hitler was quoted as saying in the speech, made before the RAF began its big-scale destruction of Berlin.

In contrast with his previous statements that Providence had helped Germany, the broadcast said:

"As so often in the past, so today Providence will bestow no gifts on our nation in its struggle for freedom and its future."

Raising the possibility of German defeat, Hitler asserted that if the Allies won "then the barbarity of the steppes would sweep across the continent and destroy it as the base and source of human culture."

Navy Takes Over Section Of Remington-Rand Plant

By the Associated Press

The Navy yesterday took over operations of a section of the Remington-Rand Co.'s Elmira plant at Southport, N. Y., in what is termed an effort to step up production and improve the quality of precision instrument parts manufactured there.

The White House first disclosed seizure of the "N" division of the plant, and the Navy subsequently explained, without giving reasons, that the factory's production was lagging "far behind schedule" and was of unsatisfactory quality. Its product was described as "an important war item."

Plant Owned by Navy

The plant, operated by the company under Navy contract, has been turning out parts used by Carl L. Norden, Inc., New York City, manufacturer of bombsights and other precision instruments used by the armed forces.

Most of the buildings and all of the tools and equipment at the factory are owned by the Navy.

Rear Admiral Harold G. Bowen, special assistant to the Undersecretary of the Navy, was placed in charge of the division and the Norden firm was designated as manufacturing agent for the Navy. Wages and other working conditions, the Navy said, will remain unchanged.

President Roosevelt's executive order directing the Secretary of the Navy to take possession of the facilities stipulated that the plant will be turned back to the company within 60 days after the President determines that it "will be operated privately in a manner consistent with the war effort."

In New York Remington issued the following statement:

"Remington-Rand is concerned at this time only with production to win the war. Its 'N' division plant has made an outstanding contribution to solution of a most difficult war production problem.

"The published assertion that production has been of an 'unacceptable quality' is manifestly unfair, since 95 per cent of the production has been passed and accepted by the naval inspectors for the Navy Department.

'The inference that the plant is behind schedule is likewise unjust as there has never been a schedule described in the contract. Regardless of who receives the final credit, Remington-Rand has pledged the Navy Department the fullest cooperation of its entire organization."

Price Posting Order Is Granted to OPA

OPA was granted an injunction in District Court yesterday to prevent Shankman's Market, 400 Kennedy st. nw., from violating OPA price posting regulations.

In the injunction suit filed last September, OPA charged that ceiling prices had not been posted in the meat department of the market, operated by Louis and Nathan Shankman.

Coal Price Increases by OPA Are Unsatisfactory to Owners

The Office of Price Administration yesterday released a detailed schedule of soft coal price increases which operators promptly branded as unsatisfactory, raising the possibility that some, if not all, of the Nation's coal mines, might be left in Government hands for the duration of the war.

Providing an average boost of 17 cents a ton to pay the cost of the wage agreement signed by Interior Secretary Harold L. Ickes and United Mine Worker President John L. Lewis for the duration of Government operation, the schedule denied any boost to coal producers in western Kentucky, Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, Kansas, northern Oklahoma, Texas and northern Colorado.

Increases Authorized

Increases up to 30 cents a ton were granted to major producing districts with increases up to 50 cents a ton in minor Western districts. Small adjustments were authorized for some mines in districts where a general boost was denied.

J. B. Morrow, president of the Pittsburgh Coal Co., second largest commercial producer in the industry, declared that the schedule would "result in decreased production of coal in western Pennsylvania."

Morrow contended that other districts with lower production costs received more favorable treatment.

Most immediate effect was expected to be a further delay in wage negotiations between the operators and United Mine Workers to facilitate return of the mines to their owners.

Ickes Talks at Parley

Ickes appeared before the coal parley yesterday and urged the conferees to try to reach a speedy settlement. It was reported that he blasted the Southern Appalachian coal operators for their failure to agree to sign a contract with Lewis based on the Ickes-Lewis pact. Other operators have agreed to do so.

Without mentioning the Southern group by name, Ickes said that one group of operators never had any intention of signing a contract since negotiations began.

Edward R. Brke, former Senator, spokesman for the Southern group, replied that his group was perfectly willing to sign a contract provided it was within the stabilization program. Burke asserted that the Ickes-Lewis agreement would be rejected by the War Labor Board if submitted by operators and miners to govern private operation.

Ickes was said to have retorted that was a matter for the War Labor Board to decide, and that the group ought to negotiate a contract and submit it to WLB to see what happens.

Operators Skeptical

The price regulation made provision for special adjustments to protect high cost producers, but operators revealed skepticism about the value of this feature of the new ceiling.

Some operators said that they were prepared to leave their mines in Government hands until OPA changed its mind and granted higher prices, with the idea of settling up in the Court of Claims after the war. Other operators hinted that they might permit the Government to return their mines and then shut down the high cost operations until a satisfactory price increase was granted.

Authorized by Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson last Saturday, the increases, which OPA said "can be passed on to domestic consumers at once, follow:

French 'WACS' May Find War Is Risque Business

Algiers, Nov. 29 (AP).—When units of the French army's feminine auxiliaries next go on parade they'll attract a lot of attention if they wear only their American-made uniforms.

Under a lease-lend agreement whereby the United States is supplying the French "WACS" with uniforms, a cargo of 5000 blouses, but no skirts, arrived recently.

New Way to Handle Payrolls

Conserves Hours of Precious Time

"TIME is the measure of business, as money is of wares." So said the great Francis Bacon three hundred years ago.

Today, under the increasing strains of war, time is not only the measure of business—it is the most critical material we possess. And the measure of American genius is its ability to create more time by finding quicker, better ways to forge a shell, mold a plastic, harvest a crop, or handle a payroll.

▲ FOR INSTANCE—this week many offices will produce today's complex payroll records in one-half the time formerly consumed. This despite the new "load" added by the Withholding Tax.

▲ THE REASON—a new payroll plan by Shaw-Walker automatically transfers each figure to the several essential records.

After writing payroll figures just once, every record needed is completed, correct and up-to-date—ready for quarterly reports and government inspection. Rewriting of figures is entirely eliminated.

Entirely eliminated, too, are separate records for War Bonds, Social Security, Withholding Tax, employee insurance, employee hospitalization, union dues and all other ledger records of a similar nature.

Every pay day the statement you give to each employee includes:

(1) A complete record of earnings.

(2) A detailed list of deductions.

(3) A notice telling the worker the exact amount he has on deposit with you toward his next War Bond.

▲ SO SIMPLE is the "KOPI-SPOT" payroll system that any clerk can handle it. It can be adapted to any type of payroll whether you pay by check or in cash—whether you make your entries by typewriter or by hand.

▲ A COMPLETE FOLDER has been prepared, illustrating the "KOPI-SPOT" and explaining its application to various payroll methods. May we send you a copy of it?

ALL MADE AT ONE WRITING: pay checks, employee pay statement, social security and withholding tax record, War Bond Record, ledger record of other deductions, check register and payroll summary.

FOR THE DURATION any old file will do—it's the system itself that counts!

AFTER THE WAR transfer the system intact to any of the following:

A SHAW-WALKER FIRE FILE—the steel file with built-in fire protection. It gives safe-like security, even in severe fires.

OR THE DRAWERS of the Shaw-Walker steel desk. This is the famous new low desk for comfort and hard work.

"Duck soup."

Asked if American losses in future operations now being planned would be relatively as high as those at Tarawa, Smith replied:

"I believe that more preparation in advance of actual landings and the other lessons in attacking Tarawa will be applied in attacks on succeeding places."

First Coral Isle Taken

One thing to be remembered, Smith said, was that the Gilberts were the first coral atolls to be captured, unlike the Solomons and certain other volcanic isles, which are larger and provide more room for maneuvering and are not surrounded by coral reefs that impede invasion.

"Our lessons were learned the hard way," correspondents suggested, and Smith agreed ruefully.

"Did the men know how hard it was going to be?"

"A number of men in the Second Division had been through the Guadalcanal fight," he said. "I believe they expected a tougher fight than they had in the Solomons.

"The older officers in the corps realized that perhaps the battle had to be won on the beach."

"Why were the American landings at Tarawa made in daylight?"

"In daylight," he said, "the landings have the advantage of naval gunfire and aviation and we feel that is better than making night attacks in which you may miss your beaches."

Everything Possible

Asked why it is not possible to keep on strafing beaches while more landings are made, he replied: "I believe both air and naval gunfire did everything that was humanly possible."

Had it not been fo rthe intensive bombings and gunfire, Smith said, the Japanese would have been able to counterattack on "D" day November 20 (Saturday) and "D plus one" day, November 21 (Sunday). The planes and warships disrupted their communications and without doubt caused a psychological situation that prevented the Japanese from organizing a counterattack, he explained.

The general said he thought a larger preparation—naval gunfire and aerial bombing, perhaps, would have meant less loss, but he added:

"Of course the longer you keep warships around a little island, the more liable they are to be attacked from the sea, under the sea and the air."

Discussing reconnaissance, he said: "We had probably as fine a set of air pictures as we could expect."

The Higgins boats (landing craft) did what was expected of them, Smith said, and he gave an affirmative answer when asked whether he had expected his men would have to leave them so soon.

"But not everybody did, though."

"Well, a fight was made to obtain certain landing craft, with the positive statement made that unless they were obtained there would be no landing—that it would be impossible.

"There is no better landing craft in the world than the Higgins boat when there are no obstacles in the water. You know, we in the Marine Corps, with the assistance of Mr. Higgins (Andrew Jackson Higgins of New Orleans), developed the Higgins boat and made a fight for it."

Smith was then asked whether it would help if four-ton blockbusters, such as are being dropped on Berlin, would help in the Pacific islands attack.

"The bigger the better," he said, smiling.

Soldier Dies of Hydrophobia

George H. Whitman of Fleetwood, Pa.

This case,Dr. James G. Cumming, chief of the bureau of preventable diseases, said last night, reemphasizes the need for people who own dogs to keep them off the highways and on leashes.

He said there are always a certain number of failures in the preventive treatment of human beings for hydrophobia, and that this case involved a very heavy implantation of virus which proved to be too great to react to treatment.

Not since 19915 has any other person contracted rabies from an animal in the District. Last year a little girl died of the disease in Children's Hospital following a bite received in Butler, Ohio.

Before that time, however, there had been no deaths since 1915, and only six deaths following rabid dog bites have been reported in the District since 1900 when the Pasteur treatment began to be used here, according to Dr. Cumming.

Health Officer George Ruhland said the Pasteur treatment and its variations is usually successful when the puncture is small, but that the larger the bite or laceration and the closer it is to the central nervous system, the more danger there is it may not work.

The treatment, he said, involves injection into the exposed person of a virus prepared from an animal artifically inoculated with rabies.

Variations, he said, occur in preparation of the virus from the spinal cord of the infected animal. Some use a drying process, others subject the cord to chemical treatment. This last process is used in the Cumming method, devised by Dr. Cumming of the Health Department.

Once a person has become visibly ill from infection, however, attempts to cure have failed 100 per cent, Dr. Cumming said.

Washington's present epidemic of rabies among animals began in June, and since that time 89 out of 142 animals examined in Health Department laboratories have been found to be rabid—87 of them dogs and 2 of them cats.

Persons bitten by dogs declared rabid now total 93, and all of these persons have been given treatment to prevent their contracting the disease.

Yesterday, three additional dog-bite cases were reported to Washington police and a fourth case was disclosed in Alexandria.

Locally, George M. Smith, 67, 2909 13th st. nw., applied for treatment at Garfield Hospital for a bite wound received last Wednesday; Nimrod Harris, Negro, 34, 935 R st. nw., was given first aid at Freedmen's Hospital for a bite on his hand inflicted by his own dog, and Belva Twyman, 59, of 2248 12th st. nw., was bitten by a neighbor's dog but did not apply for hospital treatment.

In Alexandria, police reported George Capehart, 64, of 722 Glebe rd., was recovering from a bite wound received Sunday.

The dogs in the District cases have been impounded and are under observation. The dog that bit Capehart had been inoculated against rabies but was being kept isolated.

During the entire decade, preceding the present epidemic only five cases of rabid animals were reported in the District, and these involved pets brought in from outside this area.

Animals declared rabid in Health Department laboratories, it was learned, are given three tests: their appearance or clinical manifestations are noted, a microscopic examination is made of the fluid in the head, and finally, other animals are inoculated with fluid from the suspected animal.

One dog seized by Eighth Precinct police at Connecticut ave. and Albemarle st. nw. yesterday, was taken to the pound for examination. If rabies is indicated he will be destroyed.

Last month Dr. Ruhland, after a meeting with local and nearby county health officers and animal experts, presented to the District Commissioners a six-point rabies-control program.

The program called for strict quarantine for six months, destruction of all stray dogs, destruction of dogs known to have been in contact with rabid animals, discontinuance of sale of dogs at District Pound, prohibition against dogs on the street unless on a leash and prohibition against dogs entering the city unless its owner has a certificate certifying the dog is free from rabies.

Subsequently, the Commissioners ordered that all dogs be muzzled in Washington and instructed police to make a house-to-house canvass to determine that all dogs are licensed.

No provision was made, however, for prohibiting owners from allowed their dogs to run at large when muzzled because, it was said, such a restriction would require additional legislation.

Dr. Ruhland has pointed out that muzzling in many cases is ineffective in rendering a dog harmless, and explained that saliva of a rabid dog is infectious.

Dogs can transmit the diseases a day before manifesting any symptoms, it was said.

A new dog quarantine will become effective tomorrow in Fairfax County and will prohibit dogs from running at large unless accompanied by a responsible person. The measure, adopted November 3, also provides for establishment of a dog pound.

(Early this month, the Harmons were notified again that Tommy was missing, and his father, Louis Harmon, said "They say lightning never strikes twice in the same place, but it has hit us twice. I don't think he's fallen into Jap hands if he landed safely.")

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 29 (AP).—"Thank the Lord, it's almost too good to believe," declared the 71-year-old father of Tom Harmon tonight.

Jubilantly happy, Louis Harmon asserted "We sure, sure are glad over the news, and we can hardly wait to tell moms about it."

He said Mrs. Rose Harmon, Lieutenant Harmon's 65-year-old mother, had gone to nearby Ypsilanti, Mich., tonight to visit the mother of a boy who had been Harmon's roommate in China. Harmon said the boy's mother had reported two stranded fliers had reached safety in China and one was believed to be Harmon. He did not disclose the woman's name.

U. S. Secret Arms Aid Naval Victories

One Amazing Weapon Had Been Branded As 'Impossible' by Foreign Scientists

Highly secret new weapons—one so amazing that foreign scientists branded it "impossible"—is one important reason for those recent lopsided naval victories in the Pacific, it was officially disclosed yesterday.

Rear Admiral W. H. P. Blandy, chief of the Navy Bureau of Ordnance, told reporters yesterday that some of the new American naval weapons already in use are "revolutionary in nature" and "fully comparable to the German radio-controlled bomb and acoustic homing torpedo.

While guarded in his discussion of the new weapons, Blandy said that secret gun fire control apparatus which enable our batteries to fire accurately at enemy ships when they cannot be seen at night have made possible those recent victories of our cruisers and destroyers in the South Pacific.

"This success in night actions," he said, "is largely due to our ability to measure range and distribution and point our guns at their targets in complete darkness."

New type "flashless" powder is in use, greatly reducing the enemy's chances of ranging and aiming at our ships, he added.

Furthermore, Blandy revealed armor-piercing bombs — aerial bombs with hard noses capable of penetrating armor-plated decks—have been recenly used successfully against Jap cruisers. American naval dive-bombers and torpedo planes from carriers, recently sank or crippled eight Nip cruisers in Rabaul, perhaps using such bombs.

Admiral Blandy's discussion of secret weapons came during a press conference in which he announced that his application for assignment to a sea command had been approved. He will leave here next month.

Development and research work on new naval weapons, he said, is carried on by thousands of civilian scientists and engineers, guided by some 200 naval officers in the Bureau of Ordnance.

"When the story can be told," Blandy stated, "our developments will rank as high or higher than those of our enemies, and one or two of them will even be romances in science.

"We have one development that certain foreign scientists labeled impossible. It has been done. It has been in use for many months. I can't even disclose the nature of it."

Continued secrecy concerning our naval weapons is far easier than with land weapons, Blandy pointed out, for when the Navy loses a new weapon, it usually sinks to the bottom of the sea where it cannot be captured and imitated.

"Our new weapons can be and are kept secret except that the enemy receives full knowledge of their effects," he said.

Blandy, who has been chief of the Ordnance Bureau since February 19, 1941, said he would have a command at sea in his present rank of rear admiral. He is a permanent captain. His successor has not been announced.

The official stressed the vast increase in ordnance production as well as in development of new weapons since the war began. He declared the outstanding feature of the entire program was the tremendous increase in the antiaircraft protection of ships.

Cites Advances in "Ack-Ack" ....

Early in the war, Blandy noted, "many prophets predicted the early demise of naval surface ships," but they have not only survived but have greatly multiplied in number, he said. While defense against air attacks cannot be made perfect, ships with modern ack-ack batteries can expose themselves without fighter plane cover if necessary, he declared.

"Attacking against such (anti-aircraft) defense," he stated, "even such planes as are not shot down or badly damaged have little chance of dropping their bombs or torpedoes with any degree of accuracy."

American naval and merchant ships, he said, have shot down more than 1000 enemy planes to date.

Admiral Blandy explained that the fire control apparatus on the ack-ack guns automatically computes the range, speed and how much "lead" to give the approaching plane, and added that President Roosevelt had asked if the equipment could be rigged up for his shotgun for postwar duck hunting.

The ordnance chief said that while Japan had good ordnance equipment, he didn't believe they had any weapons of a revolutionary type comparable to ours.

Adm. Hepburn in Hospital

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn, USN (retired), chairman of the general board of the Navy, is in the Naval Hospital, Brooklyn, suffering from grippe, the Third Naval District announced today. Admiral Hepburn became ill yesterday while en route from Washington to Buffalo.

Chinese Rout Two Jap Divisions at Changteh

Chungking (Tuesday), Nov. 30 (AP).—The Chinese command announced today that two Japanese divisions, roughly 30,000 men, have been routed southwest and northwest of strategic Changteh in a bitter, three-day battle and are in full retreat eastward. Chinese forces are in pursuit.

The Chinese southeast of Changteh also blunted the thrust of another Japanese column and turned it back to the north bank of the Yoan River.

Changteh still was taking heavy punishment, however, with Japanese guns pouring incendiary and gas shells into it and subjecting it to almost incessant bombings.

North of the Yangtze, the Chinese said street fighting was continuing at Tangyang, key Japanese stronghold northeast of Ichang, and other Chinese forces pushed back invaders counterattacking from several strongholds northwest of Hankow.

Further Chinese successes were reported from the southern Honan front, where the Chinese said they fought their way to the city wall of the enemy base of Sinyang, on the Peiping-Hankow Railway.

Soviet Pincers Perils Zhlobin Rail Center

London (Tuesday), Nov. 30 (AP).—Russian troops lunging in a pincers upon Zhlobin—rail hub and fortress guarding the Nazis' Gomel escape gap—speared to within 12 miles of the city from the south Monday, and seized 40 villages in a battering offensive from the west, the Soviets announced early today.

One spearhead of Gen. Constantine Rokossovsky's formations plunged within 25 miles of Bobruisk northwest of Zhlobin and on the same Gomel-Minsk railroad, Moscow declared.

The Soviet smashes thus stabbed closer to the supply system of the whole southern White Russia line, pushing the retreating Germans nearer to the old Polish frontier and new disaster.

Eight hundred Nazis were killed yesterday in fierce fighting in this area, said the Moscow communique.

Advance in Dnieper Bend

Exploding a renewed charge into the Dnieper Bend, some 220 miles to the south, other Red Armies wiped out 1500 Germans and plunged eight miles west of Cherkasy on the west bank of the Dnieper between Kiev and Kremenchug, the war bulletin declared.

In the Kiev salient, 900 Germans were reported killed and 56 tanks wrecked as Soviet forces threw back heavy new Nazi assaults north and east of Zhitomir in the Chernyakhov and Brusilov areas, and Red army planes struck heavily at German armored concentrations.

(A London broadcast quoted the Soviet radio as saying tonight that "eight German armored divisions have already been decimated in counterattacks between Zhitomir and Korosten, including divisions from Italy, Greece and Norway and the crack Adolf Hitler SS (Elite Division.")

In Gen. Rokossovsky's blow from the south, seeking to topple Zhlobin, his troops took in only 12 miles below Zhlobin, and seized seven other villages between the Berezina and Dnieper Rivers.

Thus Rokossovsky was developing a strong pincers movement upon Zhlobin, junction on the Gomel Minsk railroad and the Leningrad-Odessa main line as well. His drive from the south battled forward between the Dneiper and Berezina Rivers. Stryeshin is on the right bank of the Dnieper.

Steady advances by the Red army narrowed the escape gap of German troops—perhaps as many as 300,000—in the Gomel salient.

Advance forces driving into southern White Russia cut through the freezing fringes of the Pripet marshes up the lower Berezina, and carried to a point only 25 miles south of Bobruisk as the enemy abandoned strong point after strong point in his withdrawal toward Minsk and Poland.

The offensive was rolling forward along a 100-mile front.

Southwest of Zhlobin, a Soviet column on the lower Pripet River seized several heavily fortified Ger-

The new plunge beyond Cherkasy carved out a deeper bridgehead beyond that city on the west bank of the Dnieper, and brought a new threat to German positions to the south in the Dnieper bulge. (A German broadcast admitted the Russians are making headway in the Cherkasy area.")

The offensives southwest of Kremenchug and southwest of Dnepropetrovsk bit deeper into Nazi defenses, with the communique naming 11 enemy fortification points seized below Dnepropetrosvk and declaring that several positions were captured southwest of Kremenchug.

Again Moscow asserted German tank and infantry assaults in the Zhitomir sector had been thrown back. It said attacks were repelled in the Korosten and Chernyakhov areas, respectively 45 and 13 miles north of Zhitomir, and near Brusilov, 40 miles east of Zhitomir.

The Germans Sunday had claimed recapture of Korosten, but a Berlin broadcast today said "remnants of cut-off Soviet formations have withdrawn to three strongholds" within the town.

Army's Reaction?

Patton Case To Be Weeks In Committee

Ranking members of the Senate military committee said yesterday the Senate may be "weeks" disposing of l'affaire Patton, and that other Army promotions may be held up with the general's.

"The case doesn't lend itself to an early decision," said one member of the committee, who asked not to be named.

"General Eisenhower tells us the morale of (Lieut. Gen. George S.) Patton's Seventh Army continued high after he apologized for his clash with two hospitalized soldiers.

"But how will the first wave of publicity from this country and the opinions of their families, reflected in letters, affect their morale? That is only one of the things the committee will have to know."

The committee has tentatively arranged a meeting for Friday to consider the President's October 1 nomination of Patton and a long list of other officers for permanent advancement in Army rank.

Committee members said it was unlikely any of the nominations would be sent to the Senate until a decision is reached in the Patton case. The Senate usually approves such appointments en bloc, to avoid any unwarranted reflection on an individual officer.

Members of the committee are seeking additional information from the War Department involving other possible similar incidents, involving either Patton or other officers.

Senate Committee Approves La. Judge

The Senate Judiciary Committee gave its unanimous approval yesterday to the nomination of Elmo Pearce Lee, sr., Shreveport, La., attorney, to fill a judgeship vacancy in the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals

The committee's action was another step in filling the vacancy which precipitated a controversy when former Gov. James V. Allred of Texas, first was nominated for the judgeship, but the committee failed to approve.

8th Army Dents Nazi Line Twice

"widespread confusion and havoc" among enemy troop concentrations, barracks and road traffic in the Rome area.

The planes destroyed at least 10 trucks, damaged many railway cars and tank transporters and attacked railway stations, power plants and radio stations. Eight Nazi planes were destroyed during the day and seven Allied planes were missing.

The British took many prisoners, among them a large proportion of Poles and citizens of Lorraine, in former French territroy, who had been pressed into German service, the Allied command said.

Carrying the war outside Italy, seven separate waves of American Mitchell medium bombers made strong attacks on Dubrovnik, Sibenik and Zara, German-held ports in Yugoslavia across the Adriatic. American Liberators flew into the Alps of northernmost Italy to bomb a railway viaduct and tunnel at Dogna, 60 miles north of Trieste, where the only direct railway from Germany, aside from Brenner Pass, enters Italy. Hits were reported on the mouth of the tunnels and on the viaduct.

Light Snow Forecast Today; Cold to Continue

A light snow—probably just enough to be seen on park lawns—is due this morning, the Weather Bureau forecast last night.

Unless the forecaster missed with his calculations, the snow will not be enough to cover District streets and will in no way hamper transportation.

After the light fall in the morning the rest of the day will be "cloudy and cold," he said.

Temperature in Washington fell below freezing for the second consecutive day yesterday.

Streamlined WPB Reorganization Being Planned to Speed Up Victory Program

the post of vice chairman for industry operations, the job recently vacated by Hiland G. Batcheller, who resigned to return to the presidency of the Alleghany-Ludlum Steel Co. Pittsburgh, Pa.

Wilson thus acquired direct control over all the industry divisions of WPB—units which possess all the necessary information to make the required program "shifts" and to convert America to peacetime production eventually.

In the process of the reorganization, industry divisions are expected to be realigned to do the new job ahead, with some consolidated along "vertical" lines for more effective action.

Wilson emphasized, it was said, that an enormous production job was ahead for 1944—the output schedules next year must be maintained at a level considerably higher than this year.

What effect the change would have on Wilson's personal plans could not be learned.

He Agreed to Remain

Wilson, former president of the General Electric Corp., has submitted his resignation to WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson, but, at the request of War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes, Wilson agreed to stay on the job until President Roosevelt releases him.

It was reported that Wilson informed his associates that he would be on the job every day that was necessary, but dropped no hint as to whether he would resign January 1 as previously planned, or at a later date.

It was pointed out that part of the main WPB "management" job has been to gear our economy for rapid changes ordered by the military. Such changes have occurred regularly, but Wilson emphasized, it was said, that they would be occurring with greater frequency from now on.

Some new lessons learned on the Italian beachheads or in the Central Pacific could require important changes in some program, either of emphasis or in designs, which would have to be made quickly to be effective, it was reported.

Most dramatic example of a change already made has been provided by the tank production program, which has been tapered off sharply. The aircraft program has revealed a history of design changes to give our planes greater impact upon the enemy.

The staff meeting also was designed, it was reported, as a "pep talk"—to persuade officials that an important war job remains to be done, and that they should stay on the job to do it.

Although the country now lacks over-all plans for reconversion to peace, preliminary plans have been drawn in a number of quarters with the primary, assumption that the basic operating work will be done by WPB industry divisions.

Although the industry divisions received no formal orders to begin drawing postwar plans immediately, the meeting was regarded as an important "hint" to get ready for such an order.

It is assumed generally that collapse of the Nazi war machine would signalize the start of a partial reconversion to peace. War production would be tapered off somewhat, and production of many civilian items now banned might be resumed to the maximum extent possible without interfering with the remaining war program.

OPA Reprimanded by House Group on Prices

By Christine Sadler

For the second time this month, the House Smith Committee yesterday sharply reprimanded the Office of Price Administration for "violating express provisions of the Price Control Act" in its handling of meat prices.

In a report to Congress, the committee declared the OPA exceeded its authority by setting maximum ceilings "not generally equitable and fair" upon meats at all levels between slaughterers and retailer and "in recommending to the Director of Economic Stabilization that indirect ceilings be fixed on live cattle."

Imposed Without Consent

The live cattle ceilings were imposed without consent of the Secretary of Agriculture, it was declared, and although OPA knew the meat prices were unfair it allowed them to stand for more than seven months.

The same committee, created by the House to check on activities of executive departments, headed by Representative Howard Smith (Democrat) of Virginia, assailed OPA in the earlier report for assuming powers not expressly granted by Congress and for setting up "extra-judicial procedure" that threatened civil liberties.

The OPA meat pricing orders, it was charged, tended to concentrate meat slaughtering in the hands of a comparatively few large processors, and to destroy many small, independent slaughterers operating without processing facilities.

OPA filed with the committee a vigorous denial of charges in the first report, and is expected to defend its meat pricing record similarly.

New Post Created

Meantime, the agency yesterday moved to promote a better understanding with farm groups by creating the position of agricultural relations adviser.

Price Administrator Chester Bowles announced the new post would be filled by H. H. Williamson of Bryan, Tex., director of the Texas Agricultural Service for eight years.

Bowles said OPA would try to arrive at an understanding of problems mutual to it and the farmer through group meetings and personal contacts.

Three appointments in the food price division of the agency also were announced. John F. Gismond of New York was named price executive of the fruits and vegetables branch; Geoffrey Baker, formerly with the General Foods Corp., acting price executive of the grocery products branch, and Edward F. Ragland of Richmond, Va., acting head of the tobacco section.

WFA Bad News

Onion Famine To Continue Until April

Relief from the current onion famine, which is nationwide, cannot be expected until April, a spokesman for the War Food Administration declared yesterday.

The first onions of a new crop from Texas, which is due in April, will be the break in the shortage, he said.

A few onions are expected to be received from Mexico by January, but these will not meet the need, the spokesman said.

He said the crop this year was about normal, and attributed the shortage to these factors:

The Federal Government took 25 per cent of the crop for the armed forces and lend-lease.

2. A low ceiling price on onions made them highly desirable for use as a boiled vegetable, and housewives drew heavily on stocks of this lower-priced vegetable.

In former years the United States imported some onions from Egypt but the British have taken the entire crop this year.

The WFA spokesman said there probably would be enough onions for flavoring, but heavy usage appeared out of the question. He advised housewives to conserve any supplies they may have.

The WFA market report failed to show arrival of any onions in Washington yesterday, and wholesalers said their stocks were exhausted.

Deviation From Food Subsidy Would Be Tragic, Ellender Says

Launching the Administration's fight to save food subsidies from the "wrath of the Senate," Senator Ellender (Democrat) of Louisiana, yesterday declared a deviation from the subsidy plan of stabilization would be an expensive tragedy for Americans.

As now being used, he said, subsidies that hold down retail prices of foods to consumers are at the same time making it possible for farmers to enjoy certain and steadily rising incomes.

"If no subsidies were permitted," he asserted, "WFA and OPA would have lots less freedom to fix a favorable price for the farmers. In the case of almost each subsidized food, the producer is assured the higher price which the subsidy permits, without hurting the purchaser. Without subsidies, these prices could not be paid, unless we laid ourselves wide open to inflation."

Ellender declared prices on farm products have been permitted to rise 28 per cent more during this war than in World War I, while the retail price of food has gone up 17 per cent less. It has been possible, he pointed out, to hold the total cost of living to a 24.9 per cent increase—in comparison to 50.3 per cent in the last war—at the same time farmers were getting comparatively more. Neither would have been possible without subsidies, he contended.

Hearings on the House-approved bill to abandon subsidies December 31 will open this morning before the Senate Banking Committee with members determined "to air the entire subsidy question" and farm bloc leaders confident of an antisubsidy victory.

Running concurrently with the haarings part of the morning will be a meeting of Senators from farm states called by Senator Reed (Republican) of Kansas, for discussions on the Nation's apparent shortage of livestock feeds.

Among those present will be War Food Administrator Marvin Jones; Joseph B. Eastman, director of the Office of Defense Transportation; M. J. Gormley, executive vice president of the Association of American Railroads, and numerous other Government and transportation officials.

Reed declared transportation shortages were preventing an even distribution of feeds inside the country, but that importing feed from Canada would "require twice the transportation facilities that would be required to distribute an equal amount of surplus corn from the corn belt."

D. C. Area Man Killed in Action, 3 Wounded, Army Announces

One Washington area man has been killed in action and three others have been wounded, the War Department announced yesterday.

WESTCOTT

Lost in a raid over France was Sergt. John A. Westcott of Falls Church and Arlington. The wounded men are Capt. Richard T. Kainuma, 1346 K st. se.; Pvt. Earle W. Wilson, 1913 T st. se., and Pvt. Giles G. Lofy, 2221 40th pl. nw.

Sergeant Westcott had been missing in action for more than a year when his aunt, Mrs. Louis B. Snyder, with whom he made his home at 2423 North Ohio st., Arlington, was notified that he was dead. Radio operator and gunner on a B-17, he participated in a raid on St. Nazaire, France, November 9, 1942, and was lost at that time. The last word that his family had received from him was a letter the previous October which described a furlough that he had spent in London.

Sergeant Westcott attended school in Arlington and Falls Church and was in the last year of high school when he enlisted in the air corps in September, 1941. Trained at fields in Texas, Illinois, Utah and Massachusetts, he went overseas in September, 1942, when he was 19 years old.

KAINUMA

His father, Milton R. Westcott of Falls Church and two sisters, Mildred V. Westcott of Falls Church and Marie Y. Westcott, an Army nurse cadet in training at the Good Samaritan Hospital in West Palm Beach, Fla., survive.

Captain Kainuma, a Hawaiian of Japanese ancestry, was injured October 2 in Italy, when he was thrown from a jeep, his wife, Mrs. Mildred K. Kainuma, a secretary with the Red Cross, has learned. Born in Hawaii, Captain Kainuma attended the university there and then came to the States to attend Tulane University Medical School. He was a doctor at a hospital in Honolulu when he joined the medical corps in June, 1941.

Private Wilson, who suffered a broken left arm and left leg in Italy October 10, is now recovering in a North African hospital.

WILSON

He was born in the District and attended Wallach and Eastern High Schools. Before entering the Army in September, 1941, he was employed as a brakeman with the Pennsylvania Railroad. The 24-year-old Infantry soldier is the son of the late James Harry Wilson, passenger conductor with the Pennsylvania for 48 years, and Mrs. Blanche Wilson of the T st. address. A brother, Pvt. Thomas B. Wilson, is also overseas.

Private Lofy, the husband of Mrs. Doris B. Lofy of the 40th pl. address, was wounded in the Mediterranean combat zone.

John Irvin Johnson, 501 Peabody st. nw.; Staff Sergt. John H. Eberhardt, 5214 P st., Coral Hills, Md., and Staff Sergt. David M. Hovis, whose address was given as 1741 Lanier st. nw. The Air Medal was granted to Lieut. Earl R. Parsons, 1648 Primrose rd. nw.

Maj. Lambert, husband of Mrs. Frances Dicus Lambert of 1700 N. Oak st., Arlington, attended Maryland University, where he learned to fly under the CAA, and in 1940 won the Eastern intercollegiate aviation championship while representing the university. Ordered overseas in April he piloted Peter Masefield, air correspondent of the London Sunday Times and critic of American daylight precision bombing theories, on a raid over Le Bourget Field near Paris, on Bastille Day, which was so successful that it changed Masefield's attitude entirely.

ERHARDT

Staff Sergeant Johnson, 23, who was reported missing on his fifteenth mission over enemy territory on October 14, and who was recently found to be a prisoner in German hands, served as a turret gunner on a B-17. JOHNSON

Staff Sergeant Erhardt, 23, serial gunner and recipient of the Air Medal and four Oak Leaf Clusters, recently shot down a Focke-Wulf 190 in a raid over German territory. He was a member of the crew of the "Nan-D," a fortress that was riddled by more than 25 shells and returned to base with but one engine. Sergeant Erhardt was only scratched although the ball turret where he was stationed, was twice pierced by enemy fire.

PARSONS

A native of the District, he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Erhardt, 903 F st. ne. His wife and 9-month-old daughter, Mary Lou, live in Coral Hills. He attended Eastern High School and sold insurance before entering the Army more than three years ago.

Lieutenant Parsons, 29, pilot of a B-17, was born in Baltimore but was educated in local schools, attending McKinley High School and George Washington University. Protection For Youth

There appears to be general agreement that juvenile delinquency in this country has increased as a result of the war. Little has yet been done, however, to assess the dimensions of the problem, probe its sources or devise remedies. Senator Pepper, as chairman of a special subcommittee on wartime health and education, is now prepared to undertake this task. His group will hold hearings starting today and will canvass the opinions of a number of recognized authorities on the subject. Congress as a whole may well give close attention to his findings. For the needs of youth will not wait for the conclusion of the war. They are undoubtedly real and they are urgent.

"Our preliminary study of the question," says Senator Pepper, "indicates that prevalent attitudes range from the hysteria of those who treat the problem as one purely of police discipline to those who would put two lollipops in every hand." That we have been treating it thus far largely as a police problem is indicated by the alarming increase in the number of young people falling afoul of the law. But police action is no corrective. A careful study conducted under the auspices of the Harvard Law School has shown that 88 per cent of all delinquents brought before a juvenile court once appear there again.

Considering the dislocations of our society occasioned by the war, it is small wonder that youth suffers from them. We have provided no adequate care for the children of mothers who have taken jobs in war industries. We have not reasonably safeguarded the young people lured from school by high wartime wages. In three-fourths of the States children may leave school to go to work at 14; many thousands have done so. A report just issued by the National Child Labor Committee estimates that 750,000 youngsters under 16 years of age are now employed.

We possess no other national asset comparable in importance to the youth of America. The conditions which govern their development will in large measure govern our future. It is high time, therefore, to look at these conditions carefully and questioningly. The work of Senator Pepper's committee is of the highest importance. We hope that he will press it vigorously and offer recommendations to the Senate for affirmative action as speedily as possible.

Attorney For The Press

The Office of War Information at long last has been making good on its pledge to free the clogged news channels in the Capital. The task is not altogether easy. Sometimes it requires the kind of vigorous admonition which Elmer Davis addressed the other day to Paul McNutt. It is unfortunate that this indictment of the War Manpower Commission's news policy should have been published. It was not officially released. And, as published, it conveys the impression of another public quarrel between executive officials. Nevertheless its intent was constructive and its effects are certain to be salutary.

What Mr. Davis has done in this respect is to put himself in the position of an attorney for the interests of the press and public. This is, of course, the function which he is called upon to fulfill. Palmer Hoyt, his director of domestic operations, defined this function admirably when he first took office: "To make all the news available to the public, as quickly and clearly as possible, through the media whose job it is to inform the public." Together the two men have tackled this job with a greater degree of success than OWI had ever previously won.

Certainly we have been getting much better reporting of late from the fighting fronts. A case in point is the Navy's handling of news about our recent landings in the Gilbert Islands. Accounts of the scattered actions in the far Pacific came in promptly and in sufficient detail to give civilians at home a clear appreciation of what was going on. The Navy has never before divulged its doings with such respect for the public interest. The Army, in handling the Patton affair, managed at least to retrieve something from its initial blunder through accepting the counsel of OWI.

But while OWI concentrated on the armed services, the civilian agencies of the Government remained sluggish indeed in their news policies. The concealment and confusion exposed in WMC by the War Agencies Correspondents Association are not peculiar to that agency. They are simply more acute there and more damaging to the peace of mind of the average citizen whose life may be vitally affected by changes in manpower rulings. Mr. Davis has performed a service by prodding Mr. McNutt to greater clarity and candor. It looks as though he has also successfully prodded WPB. The more of this sort of thing he can do, the better will he be able to serve the press and, through it, the American public as a whole.

Marshall For The Job

This is the title of one of several editorials which we printed in August, 1942, urging the appointment of General Marshall as generalissimo of the Western Front. Now he has received his appointment, though the formal announcement is still to come. We can do no better than reprint our editorial of August 18, 1942, 15 months ago:

> The time is overdue to name a generalissimo for the Western Front. Time was when this step should have been preceded by the establishment of a supreme war council. But so many steps have been missed and so much sand has trickled out of the hourglass that a step-by-step program is now out of the question. Our present organizational setup is so diffuse that our production and distribution of material have lost touch with our strategy. With our strategy directed at the prevention of a Hitler-dominated Europe, our production seems to have been dammed up internally. To be sure, there is a shipping bottleneck. But an equally significant bottleneck is the Service of Supply, which, anxious to equip our growing Army in the least possible time, seems to have assumed power to divert shipments from the fighting fronts. A generalissimo would end this pulling and hauling by making supply the servant of strategy. He would end the division of authority which is the characteristic of the Capital of the United Nations. We know we are on a horse, but we seem to be galloping off in all directions—and all because there is nobody who has authoritative hold on the reins.
> Who should be the generalissimo? One name stands out as the only possible choice. That is our Chief of Staff, Gen. George C. Marshall. There is no question that he is the greatest soldier in our Army today. General Marshall has had the combat experience. In the first war he was aide de camp to General Pershing, and he demonstrated his strategical genius by plotting the St. Mihiel offensive, the first offensive in which our Army acted as a unit. Our new Army, moreover, is General Marshall's Army. And respect for his gifts of organization and his leadership is evident all the way down the line from the highest general to the lowliest private. Let us give him the opportunity and the tools, and he will finish the job. The naming of General Marshall at this critical juncture would be of immense service to the Allied cause. It would close the Russian ranks, electrify our British Allies, spread a wave of enthusiasm throughout our Nation, and give Hitler a foretaste of the knockout blow which must come when the United Nations strike their tents and march to battle.

The step has been postponed till we had secured all the advantages of position and obtained a superiority in men and materials. The Battle of the Atlantic has been won. Over Europe control of the air is ours. Our domination of the oceans and the Middle Sea is indisputably assured. The Allies have the edge in men and materials for land warfare. The long wait to come to the last grapple with Hitler has made the free peoples everywhere impatient. It is doubtless due to the military insistence on making assurance doubly sure. We may be confident that the long wait has irked the Prime Minister and the President as much as it has Marshal Stalin. Sufficient now that the day of reckoning is rapidly approaching.

Next Drive

The Treasury has announced that a fourth war loan drive will begin in mid-January. This time the goal is 14 billion dollars, with individual sales quotas set at 5.5 billions. During the last drive the Treasury succeeded in selling 18.3 billions of securities to nonbanking investors alone, exclusive of sales to Federal agencies, as compared with 13 billions in the second drive and 7.6 billions in the first drive. In all three cases the volume of nonbanking participation is somewhat exaggerated. For immediately before and during each drive commercial banks bought large amounts of outstanding securities in the market from nonbanking investors who wanted to free funds for new purchases. Sales of this character in the third drive were estimated by the New York Federal Reserve Bank to have totaled about 3.5 billions, indicating a net investment by nonbanking groups of not quite 15 billions. Since then the commercial banks have been offered more than 3 billion dollars of new issues in the form of short-term certificates of indebtedness and 2 per cent Treasury bonds.

It had been expected, in view of the tremendous response of the nonbanking public to new loan offerings, that the Treasury would rely upon nonbanking investors exclusively to purchase the securities offered during the January-February drive. Certainly there is enough money available. The continuous rapid accumulation of cash funds by individuals, corporations and other nonbanking institutional investors would enable the Government to satisfy its borrowing requirements for a long time to come without resort to the inflationary type of borrowing represented by sales of securities to commercial banks. Yet, despite the possession of huge Government balances built up by the third loan drive, the commercial banks have already been afforded opportunity to increase their purchases of Government securities at the conclusion of that drive. And now it is announced that they will be permitted to buy a limited amount of the 2¼ and 2½ per cent bond issues to be marketed during the coming drive. These purchases will be restricted to a certain percentage of the time deposits of commercial banks.

The Treasury defends its action by explaining that many commercial banks accepting time deposits perform functions similar to those of savings institutions. Nevertheless, regardless of the superficial tie-up with savings deposits, the purchase of Government bonds by commercial banks during the next loan drive will result in the creation of additional purchasing power and hence have a potentially inflationary effect on prices. No doubt the Treasury is under great pressure to provide the smaller commercial banks with opportunities for adding to their income by expanding their investments in Government bonds carrying higher rates of interest. And there is some reason for yielding to such pressure in view of the restricted volume of commercial loans and the increase in bank operating costs.

The main emphasis, however, should and unquestionably will be placed on sales to nonbanking investors, especially to individuals, who have been alloted a quota of 5.5 billions. For the greater the sales to individuals, the less will be the funds in consumer hands available for bidding up prices of scarce goods and services.

Goebbels' Bleat

Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels went to the microphone on Sunday to reassure the population of blitzed Berlin that vengeance would be meted out to the "criminals on the Thames." A threat of retribution was the best he could do under the circumstances. He could not assure the people of Berlin or any other German city that they would be protected against bombing. Past promises along that line by Hermann Goering and others have turned very sour in German mouths. Nor could Goebbels even hold out to the Germans the promise of certain victory. In view of what is happening on the Eastern Front this, too, would have been wryly received. His emphasis was negative. Germany, he said, will not be driven into unconditional surrender by the "air terror" against the "kind-hearted" and "sentimental" German people. "Never, under no circumstances will we take the course of such desperate measures," he said. And he added that: "Today there is no sign of weariness (in Germany), of slackness or a decline in idealistic forces in the face of increased demands made by the long duration of the war."

But, as Berliners viewed the damage and destruction visited upon their city by the RAF, as they contemplate the prospect of more and even heavier raids, and see before them nothing but an endless succession of defeats for their armies on the fronts, it is doubtful that their spirits will be lifted by what Dr. Goebbels has told them, or by what any other Nazi leader could tell them. The evidence of the senses is too overwhelming to be offset by Nazi oratory and loud threats of revenge.

Chance For States

Most of our readers will agree, we think, that speeches by State officials condemning the centralization of power in Washington have become pretty tiresome. Not that they are dealing with a dead issue. On the contrary, the division of authority between Washington and Main Street is both an active and vital problem. Complaints from State officials to the effect that the Federal Government is grabbing up their powers bring a yawn or a sigh chiefly because the States so frequently do nothing more than grumble about it.

Some of the Governors now recognize, however, that bureaucracy flourishes in Washington principally because many of the States have failed to meet their responsibilities. That refreshing note stood out in the address of Gov. Raymond E. Baldwin of Connecticut in New York last week. He sees danger that our democratic system will cease to exist if we cannot prevent the breakdown of government at the Main Street level. This certainly ought to be suggestive to many of the State executives and legislators who are bewailing the spectacle of bureaucracy-bound Washington, for they can now look forward to the opportunity of doing many of the things for which they have heretofore asked help from Washington.

Nearly all of the States are piling up surpluses of revenue as a result of the war. Public improvements have been virtually halted because of the shortage of building materials and revenue has been increased by war prosperity. The States are thus sharply reducing their debts while the Federal Government is taking upon its shoulders a mountain of debt that makes all previous governmental obligations appear puny. Added to this is the fact that the Federal Government will be overburdened in the postwar period with the problems of making peace and establishing a new world order, with reconversion of industry and demobilization of an enormous army. It is likely to have a minimum of both time and funds to devote to purely local functions. Here is unquestionably a great opportunity for a comeback for the States and local governments if they have the courage and foresight to seize it. If they do not, complaints about the loss of authority to Washington bureaus will be a waste of breath.

AUTUMN EVENING

The autumn evening gathers, and the wind
Rises with darkness, skating the yellow leaves
From the small sapling past the window-pane;
The air grows colder; there are gusts of rain.

Through the still city comes the troubled voice
Of wild geese, on the pond below the hill,
Or lost in blackness, as unseen they fly
Across the vastness of star-hidden sky.

So with the foliage and the passing birds
My troubled days draw swiftly to an end,
Although the dawn bring winter, there shall be
Bright skies, clear air, and new tranquillity.

District Government

A Communication

ALONG WITH MANY others I read with interest and hope Senator McCarran's proposal for a change in the District government on which hearings will be held next week and along with many others I was disappointed. It is another of the many suggestions for change in form without change in fact.

The only part of it that has significance is its promise of suffrage so limited in its effect that many persons would refuse to exercise it on the score that it is a mockery and yet seems to place responsibility upon them. In the States the electorate is sovereign. So voting means something. Under the McCarran plan Congress remains the sovereign, the voters remain its subjects. Yet futile as this limited suffrage would be, it is enough to arouse the old opposition.

It is an axiom that if a government is to produce it must have both power and responsibility. If it has only responsibility while power resides elsewhere, then anything it may accomplish is merely by sufferance and good luck. Our present District government does as well as could any other form under present conditions. It is made to assume responsibility while Congress retains power. Elected Commissioners and a city manager, no matter how large his salary, would not change this.

People of the District

It seems evident that Congress has no intention of giving the people of the District any real authority over District affairs. There are several reasons for this negation, some of them based upon conviction as to the national interest. So, accepting as a fact that Congress will not now divest itself of its plenary power over the District, the question is how can that power be exercised responsibly instead of irresponsibly. If Congress will not give power to the District government, will it assume responsibility? Of this there is some hope. Senator McCarran's plan is indicative. It would give added responsibility to the two District committee chairmen. It should go farther and give more responsibility to the two District committees, make them in fact a "strong" city council for the District.

Congress having refused to divest itself of its powers or to delegate those powers to a local government, it is here proposed that it delegate the exercise of its powers to committees of its own members and of its own choosing. At present any one of the 531 members of Congress may at any time interfere with and upset any policy or program of the District government—or, for that matter, of the two District committees. That is a reason why good men are so loath to serve on either of the District committees.

Forms of Government

This proposal then is that forms of District government remain as they now are, but that the two District Committees of Congress be given all the powers of a real city council, together with its responsibilities. This means that all District legislation and appropriations shall originate in and be dealt with by these two committees; that Congress shall accept and enact the committee recommendations without debate; provided only that question may be raised on the floor of either house if the national interest is adversely affected.

The big question that remains is that of the Federal financial contribution. This the two District Committees would have to take up with the Appropriations Committees and then submit to the Senate and the House. Otherwise all regular matters of legislation and appropriation would be determined by the two District Committees. Members of Congress not on the two District committees would have no responsibility for District affairs and no right to intervene except through the District Committees whose constituents they would be as electors are constituents of other city councils.

The advantages of thus joining power and responsibility are obvious. In addition, membership on the two committees would be more attractive to able Congressmen. Urban problems are of increasing importance throughout the country, so a strong city council for the District that makes a good record in dealing with these problems would give prestige to its members. RESIDENT.

Washington, Nov. 29.

Marshal Petain

Marshal Philip Petain's abortive coup to restore constitutional democracy to France is a patent fraud that will not deceive anyone. Coming from the French leader who shut his eyes to the extermination of French Jews and to the deportment of French labor, such a gesture seems grotesque and silly. The man who zealously buried the Third Republic and banished "Liberte-Egalite-Fraternite" to put in its stead the Fascist credo of "Patrie-Famille-Travail" cannot now redeem himself and his confreres by a show of resurrecting what he helped to destroy.

Let us recognize Petain's "conversion" for exactly what it is, namely, a shifting to the popular, triumphant cause. The action is divorced from any principle other than that of expediency. The opportunistic pattern of escape set by Darlan and now tried with a slight variation by Petain will certainly repeat itself again and again as the Allies draw nearer their final victory. Every Quisling and quasi-Quisling regime in Europe will ultimately follow this pattern. But none but fools will be fooled.

Political Offensive

By Barnet Nover

Three Ways To Smash The Reich

THE WAR IN EUROPE will be brought to a successful conclusion, so far as the Allies are concerned, when Germany's capacity to wage war has been destroyed, or when the German will to wage war has been broken, or through a combination of the two.

As long as the German armies were winning, no political or psychological offensive designed to undermine German morale had any chance of success. It was only after the tide of battle began to turn, a little more than a year ago, that any crack in the German home front could be expected to develop.

In other words, the first assault on German morale had necessarily to take the form of continuous, unrelenting and successful military pressure. And there can be no doubt that as a result of the blows received by the Wehrmacht on the Eastern Front and in the Mediterranean during the past year, and by Germany herself through Allied air raids, German morale has sagged.

THE TIME is now at hand when, in addition to attacking German morale through military means, an attempt can be made to undermine Germany's military capacity by a direct assault on her morale.

To do this most effectively there must be unity among the Allies on the subject of what ought to be done with Germany and the Germans after Hitler has been destroyed.

Such unity was lacking for a long time. Great Britain and the United States, on the one hand, and Soviet Russia, on the other, waged their common war on the Reich in isolation. This was true in the political as well as the military sphere.

The Anglo-American formula for Germany was "unconditional surrender." The Russian formula, so far as could be determined, was that embodied in the program of the so-called German Committee of Liberation.

At the Moscow meeting of foreign ministers, however, Russia joined Great Britain and the United States in demanding unconditional surrender of the Reich.

UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER is a military, not a political, objective.

After Germany has surrendered unconditionally, what then? Will she be partitioned or allowed to retain her pre-Hitlerite frontiers? Will a distinction be made between the Nazis and the rest of the German population? What about Germany's economic future as a defeated state?

Regarding these questions there has been, until now, no agreement among the Allies. But if such an agreement is in process of being reached by Messrs. Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin, a major psychological offensive against the Reich will then be possible. For it will then be possible to drive a wedge between the Germans who, like Hitler himself, have nothing further to lose by fighting the war to the bitter end and those who personally have everything to lose if the war goes on.

THE BOMBING of Berlin brings that point out emphatically.

Were Germany still in a position to win the war, the bombed-out inhabitants of the German capital might comfort themselves with the thought that their sacrifices not only contribute to ultimate victory, but that, through victory, their sacrifices will in whole or in part be made good.

But if the Germans are convinced, as many of them must now be, that there is not the slightest possibility of a German victory, the sacrifices they are making will appear to them futile and foolish, particularly if they are also convinced that when peace comes they themselves will not suffer the fate of the Nazi war criminals.

It is true, of course, that none of the avenues of expression are open to Germans today that were open to them in 1918, that the Nazi regime is far more ruthless in putting down manifestations of discontent than was the regime of the Kaiser. But if through combined military-air pressure and political offensive the Allies can widen the split between the Nazis and the German people generally, the gap may be too great to be bridged even by Nazi terrorism.

GERMANY'S THREE largest cities are Berlin, with a normal population of 4,250,000; Hamburg, with 1,647,000, and Cologne, with 757,000. They also happen to be the most heavily blitzed cities in the Reich.

In view of the demonstrated strength, range and bomb-dropping capacity of Allied air power based on England and Italy, it must now be clear to the Germans that it would be a very much easier job to destroy Germany's smaller cities, no matter where they are located, than it was to destroy Hamburg and lay Berlin waste. And a great many of these cities, including Essen, Dortmund, Duesseldorf, Frankfurt, Bremen, Stuttgart, Munich and others have already been attacked not once but many times.

An Allied political offensive at this time may thus pay handsome dividends in shortening the war by months. But whether such an offensive can be launched at this time will depend on the degree of unity on the German question that now exists among the major Allied powers.

Army Nurses

I wonder if the well-meaning authors of laudatory articles and movie scripts concerning the Army nurse really know her exact status. I'm afraid even nurses don't know. I'm forced to conclude Congress doesn't care.

She is a rubber-stamp officer without full rank, privileges and overseas pay accorded male and WAC officers of equal rank.

It is universally agreed that any army has always had definite need for the nurse. A nurse repeatedly proves that her professional care and judgment reduces morbidity and mortality rates. Her very presence among soldiers is of intangible benefit to morale because she is the only link between the unreal wartime existence and the former desirable civilian life. Figuratively, a nurse represents a feminine prototype back home, but she also represents a practical means of relief (within limits) from very real physical or mental pain. In this war she is more liable to give her own life or contract a devastating disease as well as save lives.

She is "all this and heaven, too," but still does not receive full privileges and overseas pay accorded male and WAC officers. It is not only a man's world but a WAC's, too.

I thoroughly enjoy being a member of this noble profession, but not noble about accepting shabby recognition. I appeal to the American Nurses Association, the American League of Nursing Education, the individual nurse, the champion of lost causes, to remind Congressmen that the Army nurse has been duly tried and found capable of receiving full rank, privileges and overseas pay equal to male and WAC officers.

Economy Bloc

It is extremely interesting to note that the so-called "economy bloc" in Congress, together with other groups flaunting equally high-sounding labels, has ganged up to defeat the increased income levies and subsidy program planned by the Government to retard inflation. In view of the records of these groups it is clear that their interest is not in economy or any other constructive measure, but in facilitating a return to "normalcy" under the economic dictatorship of the past. The fact that the people and enlightened business leaders have long since repudiated this retrogressive notion impresses them not at all. They are so steeped in the past and its processes that they are impervious to the demands of the present and future.

Wasteful Driving

It is a battle to get sufficient gas and tires from the ration boards. They calculate your bare necessities to the nearest gallon, and your tires are few and far between, and often you don't get them at all. This is all well and good. I am in favor of conserving such critical material.

But, while the ration boards save it with one hand, fast drivers squander it with the other. The national speed limit is 35 miles per hour and this is about as well obeyed as was prohibition. I am on the highway every day and I know. The average speed on the highway is around 50 miles per hour and many drive around 55 miles per hour.

What does this mean to us who try to hold down to the speed limit? It means this: Fast driving is wasting 30 per cent of our gasoline and about 60 per cent of the tires. Putting it another way, for example, one car driving 100 miles a day at 50 miles per hour wastes enough gasoline to give another person 150 miles of pleasure driving per week, and enough tires to drive twice that far while others go without tires or gas.

Why Not An Opera House?

"Leaders, why not a Washington opera house?" asks Mr. Cleo A. Reeder in your issue of November 23, after reviewing the deplorable situation in the Nation's Capital.

If your correspondent will turn to the pages of your paper and those of the other Washington newspapers for February 15, 1939, he will find a forceful plea by the late Washington's own opera and concert artist, Emma Redell. After singing all over the world and in the leading operatic institutions, Miss Redell returned home to sing Elsa in "Lohengrin." The moment she looked at the stage in Constitution Hall, her heart sank. She had been away from Washington since the early 20's. America had known the most prosperous days of our country's history, and she had expected to find not only beautiful office buildings, but some first-class opera house, a dramatic theater and other cultural institutions. She was shocked to find a kindergarten stage in Washington on which she was to sing the heroic role of Elsa in "Lohengrin."

With her characteristic readiness to help the situation, she pledged to give 10 concerts to start raising funds for a million-dollar opera house in her native city. She prepared at the suggestion of Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas a plan to make Washington the music center of our country. Miss Redell often deplored the commercial character of music which it had acquired in our super-commercial city of New York. She wanted to make Washington the Mecca of culture in America, and advocated the Government taking a hand in bringing this about.

Freedom For Sale

By Paul Winkler

Political Prisoners

IT IS PROFITABLE to be an intimate friend of Hermann Goering in Nazi Germany. Baroness von Einem, one of those closest to him, has found it so. Her activities in the selling of favors did not date simply from the war, as did those of Col. Joseph Veltjens, who ran the black markets in the occupied countries, and was killed last month in an airplane crash. Some years before the war, she became one of the most regular passengers on the air routes between Berlin on one hand and Paris and Amsterdam on the other, these two cities being her chief centers of operation. The merchandise she had to sell was freedom.

The method by which the Baroness operated was as follows:

Her agents in Paris or Amsterdam approached the families of German Jews or political prisoners in concentration camps in Germany, and informed them that they would be able to obtain the release of their relatives, as well as passports for their departure from Germany, if substantial amounts in foreign exchange were paid for the privilege. In most cases, there had been no publicity about the arrests of the victims, and the very knowledge of their cases displayed by the intermediaries indicated that they had access to official German records.

Demand For Payment

The principal in these releases was represented as an "English officer," whose motives were assumed to be of the purest, the demand for payment being only to cover the expenses of bribing guards, civil servants, and so forth. If the persons contacted showed interest, he put in a personal appearance to discuss further details. He used various names, but the English officer disguise was invariable. Actually he was a German who had been educated at Oxford, where he had acquired an authentic English accent. He was the principal assistant of the Baroness, and worked in close association with her.

The minimum sum asked for these escapes was $5,000, half payable in advance, and the rest when the prisoner was released from concentration camp. The victim was not allowed to leave Germany until the entire sum had been paid, but there were apparently no violations of the promise to get them out of the country. Delivery was scrupulously made, no doubt in the interest of future "sales."

There was no upper limit for the price asked, which varied with the wealth of the persons concerned, $50,000 and even $100,000 being charged in some cases. In such big deals, when there was occasional doubt of the "officer's" ability to deliver on the part of the person paying the ransom, the Baroness herself appeared, to back up the story of the "English officer," who always told his clients quite frankly that his ability to free prisoners depended upon her influence with Goering.

Occupation of Paris

After the occupation of Paris the Baroness appeared there a number of times, sometimes in the company of Veltjens, whose black market racket was also operated under Goering. Deals were made in various Paris cafes, and though individual fees were smaller, the number of operations was larger—making the organization of these releases more nearly comparable to Veltjens' extensive black market network.

It is significant that Veltjens was at one time the pilot of the private plane which the Baroness used for her frequent trips to Paris and Amsterdam before the war. The trails of these two profiteers of misfortune, leading straight back to Hermann Goering, are not the only ones which point in that direction. There is, for instance, that of his Hermann Goering Werke, originally formed by expropriation for Goering's personal benefit of German industrial plants owned by men who failed to fall in with the Nazi regime. Managed by his brother, this concern participated in the taking over of industry in the occupied countries, along with such other organizations as the Schroeder Bank of Cologne and Hamburg, in close association with Goering. Goering likewise is the recipient of art treasures seized in other countries, and though some of the objects taken go to his personal palaces, it does not seem possible that he can be acquiring, simply for the satisfaction of his own tastes, the tremendous hordes of art pouring into Germany. It seems clear that just as he headed the black market trust, and through the Baroness von Einem made a racket of ransoming prisoners, so he is operating an art trust for the reception of stolen masterpieces.

Why is Goering behind all these operations? Personal greed? That does not seem to be the answer. He appears to be operating as a trustee for all the Nazis bigwigs, if not for the party itself. It is his job to accumulate the vast fortune intended to serve himself and his friends, according to the circumstances, as escape money—or as funds to start again for another climb to power.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

House On Tuesday And Wednesday

ON TUESDAY THE House voted about subsidies and on Wednesday it voted about taxes. Unless Congress means to go on record as determined to weaken the existing wartime control of the effects of inflation without putting any better control in its place, the action of the House will have to be reconsidered. For the action of last week is so incoherent and so confusing that it cannot possibly be the last word by Congress on the subject.

LIPPMANN

No wonder that Senator Taft, who will hardly be suspected of being a New Dealer planning a fourth term, has already felt it necessary to break away from the position taken by his party in the House, and to seek a more constructive solution.

ON TUESDAY the House voted to outlaw what it called "consumer-subsidy" programs for agricultural products, arguing the people have lots of money and can afford to pay higher prices for food. The next day, on Wednesday, the House voted against a substantial increase of taxes, arguing that the people now have so little money left that they cannot pay more taxes. On Tuesday, when the subject was subsidies, the cry went up that the billion dollars for food subsidies must not be passed on to future generations to pay. On Wednesday, when the subject was taxes, the House voted to pass on to future generations an extra eight billions of debt rather than vote that amount of taxes now.

WHEN THE TREASURY presented its tax proposals, it was said, and I believe correctly, that in relieving the nine million smallest taxpayers of the obligation to pay a direct tax, the Treasury was politically minded. But a comparison of the excise taxes and postal rates proposed by the Treasury and those actually voted by the House will show that when it came to levying new taxes which fall upon the mass of the voters, to levying what are in effect selected sales taxes, the House was just about half as brave and nonpolitical as the Treasury.

The Treasury called for an additional 2500 millions of excise taxes on articles of general consumption. The House was willing to vote only 1378 millions. The details are interesting. The Treasury wanted to slap an additional 758 millions of taxes on alcoholic drinks; the House voted only 460 millions. The Treasury wanted another 485 millions on tobacco; the House would not vote any new tobacco tax. The Treasury wanted an additional 367 millions on soft drinks, candy, and chewing gum; the House would vote none. The Treasury wanted another 167 millions on jewelry; the House cut this down to 82 millions.

Now if we are going to tax consumption, which all who favor a sales tax agree is necessary to discourage inflationary spending, then the obvious place to begin taxing is on the consumption of luxuries like drink, tobacco, candy, and jewelry. But the House, which on Tuesday did not object to raising the price of bread, meat, milk, and vegetables, was on Wednesday opposed to raising substantially the price of cigarettes, cigars, whiskey, gin, beer, wine, soft drinks, candy, chewing gum, and jewelry.

THE POSITION of the House on subsidies is so shot through with self-contradiction that it is not intelligible. It was supposed to be outlawing "consumer-subsidy programs" on "any agricultural commodity." But it exempted subsidies on competitive domestic oils and fats and oil seeds. It did not outlaw the subsidies which keep down the price of mineral oil in the Eastern States, or of coal. It did not outlaw any subsidy to producers or any subsidy used "to support prices." It outlawed only subsidies which are designed to protect the consumer against rising prices.

The idea that the House was voting against what we have been told is the immoral, uneconomic, un-American, wasteful, inflationary use of public funds for subsidies is, therefore, not true. What on earth was it voting against? It was supposed to be voting against "consumer-subsidies."

This means, presumably, subsidies like that for butter, bread, and part of the meat subsidy, which are designed to give the consumer these necessaries of life at a somewhat lower price than the prices paid for them to the producers and processors. If this is what the House was objecting to, the matter is certainly debatable, and it may be that on careful consideration they ought to be modified or perhaps even abandoned.

BUT THE HOUSE legislation did not discriminate against subsidies of this type. It outlawed subsidies which, though they are paid to producers to cover differentials in cost, are set up so as to stabilize prices for consumers. The larger part of the subsidies outlawed by the House are of this type: these are the subsidies for potatoes, truck crops, corn, hay, feed wheat, fluid milk, onions, lard, sugar beets, canned vegetables, and that part of the meat subsidy paid to non-processing slaughterers who would otherwise be closed down.

Subsidies of this type, designed to induce greater production, to make up differentials between one section of the country and another, and between low cost and high cost producers, certainly inure to the benefit of the consumers. But surely that is not an objection to them unless it is the view of the majority of the House that subsidies are desirable if they raise prices and are vicious if they stabilize prices.

THE ACTION OF the House on subsidies and on taxes cries out for reconsideration. The whole subject, the most critical on our home front, needs to be subjected to much more informative and searching reporting and interpretation by the press and the radio than, owing to the drama of the war news, it has as yet had. And then when the facts and the issues have become better understood by all of us, the subject needs a more thorough debate in the Senate than it got in the House.

Wartime Washington

By Merlo Pusey

Useful And Dangerous Subsidies

THE BEST approach to the subsidy muddle, it seems to me, is for legislators to ask themselves what they are trying to do.

PUSEY

If an agreement can be reached as to objectives, it should not be impossible to determine which subsidies contribute to that end and which do not. Then it would be a relatively simple matter to keep the useful subsidies and discard the others.

Only one major reason for payment of the subsidies in question is advanced — curtailment of inflation. That is a worthy aim. Almost no one will take exception to it. Controversy arises because of the belief that some of the subsidies now in use do not effectively serve this purpose. To get at the roots of this issue, therefore, we must analyze the nature of the present inflationary threat.

Inflation usually has many causes, but chief among these causes at present is the fact that the Government is pouring out far more money than it is collecting. That money goes into the pockets of the people, chiefly in the form of wages paid for war work. Naturally, the people wish to spend this money to satisfy many wants. To some extent they are unable to do so because the war has created a severe scarcity of civilian goods. So they bid high for those things which can be bought, and the tendency is for the value of goods to go up and of money to go down.

Now the dangers in this situation could be greatly minimized by rolling back into the Treasury this surplus purchasing power that is threatening to blow the lid off from OPA prices. Here is where inflation controls have most seriously broken down. Lack of political courage on the part of both the Treasury and Congress seems to have scotched the hope of enacting a tax bill that would bring the inflow of funds into reasonable relationship with the outflow. Nevertheless, the Administration wishes to swell the outflow by payment of rollback subsidies.

IT IS of the utmost importance to remember that subsidies are part of the outflow that feed the fires of inflation. Their effect is put more purchasing power into the hands of the people when the need of the hour is to capture the excess purchasing power they already have to help pay for the war. From this unquestioned fact we may draw the conclusion that subsidies should be used sparingly and only in those cases where there is clear-cut evidence that they will set in motion stabilizing influences more far-reaching than their inflationary effects.

Some of the subsidies which the House voted to ban can undoubtedly be justified on this basis. CCC funds are now being used, for example, to reward farmers who increase production of certain crops essential for war purposes and to guarantee cooperating farmers against a collapse of prices if the war should suddenly end. These are legitimate expenses incident to the war. In some instances, too, moderate subsidies to keep the price of food from rising exorbitantly because of war conditions are useful in keeping our economy on an even keel.

The real difficulty is that the Administration didn't stop with subsidies that have more pulling power toward stabilization than pushing power toward inflation. Under pressure from organized labor it resorted to rollback subsidies which have the effect of giving all consumers more money to pay for their groceries. Here is a clear case of rolling money out of the Treasury to add to the inflationary tide without compensating advantages. Handing money to people who, taken as a group, already have more than they can spend, is a direct stimulus to inflation. In taking a stand against these subsidies Congress is fighting inflation instead of encouraging it.

SPONSORS of the rollback idea advance two arguments in its favor. First, it will help consumers whose incomes have not been increased by the war. But the rollback subsidies are not limited to that group. They go to everyone. That is equivalent to using a steamshovel to fill a paste jar.

The principal argument for the rollback idea, of course, is that it will aid the Administration in holding the line against wage increases. In other words, subsidies are needed to appease organized labor. The facts are that average hourly wages have advanced much faster than the cost of living. Workmen have more surplus funds than they had a year ago. Yet the Administration wants to give them further help in paying their food bills. That is the equivalent of a wage increase for everyone. Hence it is a breach of the stabilization line instead of a buttress for it.

Congress is under obligation to give the President more help in holding the line against the inflationary demands of organized labor. But the help it gives should be something more tangible and less dangerous than an appeasement fund.

Cancellation Of Brewster Orders Likely

By Mary Spargo

The House Naval Affairs Subcommittee, now preparing a report and recommendations on the failure of the Brewster Aeronautical Corp. to produce Corsair fighters for the United States Navy is likely to recommend cancellation of the Navy's last contract with the corporation, The Post learned last night.

The subcommittee is currently reported split on the subject of whether to ask the Navy Department to cancel its contracts—a request which the Navy is likely to grant if the report is adopted by the full committee. The majority of the subcommittee appears to be in favor of cancellation, it was indicated yesterday.

The committee will continue its two-month hearings into the company's production failure today, with Henry J. Kaiser, shipbuilder and production genius, as a witness.

Kaiser will report on the progress he has made as president of the corporation since October 7, and his expectation of future production.

Probably Last Witness

Probably the last witness before the subcommittee completes its report, Kaiser may be able to convince the subcommittee that the plants will be able to produce the 1500 fighter planes which Undersecretary James V. Forrestal has termed "desperately needed."

The West Coast shipbuilder, however, will be talking to a committee some of whose members, notably Representative Hebert (Democrat) of Louisiana, have been openly antagonistic to him and to his ideas of management-labor cooperation.

Serving without compensation, Kaiser assumed the presidency and active management of the Brewster Corp. October 7 at the request of the Navy Department, which turned to him admittedly as a last resort to get production of the essential fighter planes.

Two factors, it is understood, are uppermost in the consideration of a recommendation that the Navy cut its losses at Brewster and withdraw the contract.

The first is the contention by those committee members advocating such a policy that the testimony shows that the 20,000 Brewster employes have acquired extremely poor "work habits," and will not produce sufficiently well to justify the millions of dollars of taxpayers' funds which are being poured into the plants.

De Lorenzo An Issue

The second consideration is based on insistence of the labor union in retaining as its president, Thomas V. De Lorenzo, who admitted to a string of aliases and falsification of statements on Federal and State records when he appeared before the committee.

Through its official organ "Brewster Aero Notes," Local 365 UAW-CIO has defended De Lorenzo and attacked the subcommittee headed by Representative Drewry (Democrat) of Virginia as a "labor baiting" group.

Stung to anger by the newspaper's attacks, one of which expressing the wish that a member of the subcommittee were in Germany, the committee yesterday served a subpena on Gabriel De Angelis, editor of the paper, to produce a file of the publication for the last two years.

The subpena also called for the records of the educational committee which De Angelis heads. In his testimony before the committee, the Italian-born labor leader said the educational committee attempted to teach workers at Brewster how to be good union members. He was asked if it did not teach "the techniques of strikes and slow-downs."

R. L. Vaniman, WPB Automotive Executive, Resigns

By the Associated Press

R. L. Vaniman said last night he had submitted his resignation as director of the War Production Board's automotive division and "believed and hoped" it shortly will be accepted. He will return to the automobile industry.

Vaniman indicated he was leaving because he felt that approval of the 1944 truck program on November 2 meant the completion of his major task.

He emphasized that his departure should not be construed as any indication of steps toward reconversion of the auto industry. "To talk of reconversion at this time is heresy," he declared.

Vaniman came to WPB almost two years ago on leave from the Chrysler Corporation. He was director and general manager of Chrysler Motors, limited, and Dodge Brothers, limited, in London for several years, and before joining WPB was executive manager of Chrysler for Africa.

UAL to Vote On 10 Million In New Issues

A special meeting of United Air Lines Transport Corp. stockholders to approve proposals for raising approximately 10 million dollars for post-war expansion will be held December 22 in Chicago, the company announced yesterday.

Proposals, the company said, include changing the name to United Air Lines, Inc.; authorizing 200,000 shares of preferred stock with a par value of $100 per share; increasing the authorized amount of common stock from two million to 2,500,000 shares and raising its par value from $5 to $10 per share, and authorizing 100,000 shares of management stock.

W. A. Patterson, company president, said in a letter to stockholders the company expected to issue 105,032 shares of the proposed 200,000 of preferred stock immediately. These shares, he said, would be offered to stockholders late in December at the ratio of seven shares of preferred for each 100 shares of common and would be convertible into common stock at the holder's option any time within 10 years.

Patterson said officers and directors of the company "are satisfied that transportation by air of passengers, mail and cargo will grow impressively in the years that lie ahead and, therefore, the corporation must prepare for a broad program of capital investment."

United Air Lines now has 1,500,450 shares of common stock outstanding, held by approximately 25,000 stockholders.

Lepke Moves Step Closer To the Chair

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—Louis (Lepke) Buchalter, a one-time chieftain of the "dollar-a-death" syndicate, Murder, Inc., tonight appeared headed finally for the electric chair he has eluded for years.

The spotlight turned once more on the heavy-set, dark-eyed gangster as Attorney General Francis Biddle disclosed that the Federal Government was willing to give him up if the State of New York gave assurances it would carry out the death penalty.

Lepke, who rose from a youthful burglar to a criminal prominence that led Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, then district attorney, to describe him in 1939 as public enemy No. 1, is serving a 14-year Federal sentence on a charge of operating a 10-million-dollar narcotics ring.

New York convicted him in 1941 for the 1936 slaying of Joseph Rosen, a Brooklyn candy shop proprietor described by the prosecution as a police informer.

Execution Twice Deferred

Dewey deferred the execution date for Lepke and two associates, Emanuel (Mendy) Weiss and Louis Capone, three times on the ground that President Roosevelt had not granted a conditional pardon on the narcotics charge to Lepke.

In a sharply critical letter to Dewey, Biddle today said that "statements and implications in your public announcements that we (the Justice Department) are openly resisting your efforts to have Buchalter's death sentence executed are totally unwarranted."

Biddle said his attention had been drawn to the Governor's "recent press announcements to the effect that the President has failed to make Louis Buchalter available to the authorities of the State of New York to be dealt with in accordance with law."

"It is surprising to me," Biddle wrote, "that you should choose to communicate with the President or with me in this important matter through the medium of the press."

Awaits Pledge

"When you advise me that the State of New York is ready to carry out the death sentence imposed by the State court, I shall promptly take up the matter of commutation with the President."

Lepke, once regarded in the underworld as invincible to the law, first captured public attention in 1939, when his trial on the narcotics charged disclosed a fabulous story of the huge narcotics shipments from the Orient and Europe to the United States.

Carried by Women

United States Attorney John T. Cahill told the Federal Court that the ring plied its trade through a combination of beautiful women, such first-class steamships as the Queen Mary and bribes to customs guards.

First, agents in Shanghai shipped the contraband to France, where it was placed in the luggage of the women. The women "escorted" the narcotics across the ocean and on this side their luggage passed swiftly through paid-off guards, Cahill said.

Hardly had the Federal Government obtained a conviction than a State court convicted Lepke on a charge of extortion in a trucking racket.

Lepke's luck had turned. District Attorney William O'Dwyer won a murder conviction against him in a trial marked by the disappearance of potential witnesses and the reluctance of citizens to serve as jurors.

O'Dwyer said on one occasion that seven possible witnesses against Lepke had been killed and that there were "only four more to go to remove all evidence against him."

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

AS A FORTUNE-TELLER, THIS BLACK CAPE IS MY STOCK AND TRADE, KING. THE "GHOST" BANDIT IS TRYING TO THROW SUSPICION ON ME!
POSSIBLY, ZERO. I'M GOING TO QUESTION YOUR NEIGHBORING CAMPER, WHO, ODDLY ENOUGH, ALSO DRESSES LIKE THE "GLOWING GHOST."

BUT, MY DEAR GIRL, YOU CAN'T WALK TEN MILES ON THAT SPRAINED ANKLE... OH, SOMEONE'S COMING... A-A MOUNTIE!

Ship Strike Threat Seen In Union Move

By Walter Wood

Possibility of a shipping strike which could tie up the movement of troops and supplies to Pacific war fronts arose yesterday with the disclosure by the War Shipping Administration that members of the powerful Seafarers Interntional Union have signified their refusal to take the proposed WSA medical exxaminations for men of the Merchant Marine.

Developments, announced by Capt. Edward Macauley, deputy WSA administrator, are these:

1. WSA over the weekend received a letter from Harry Lundeberg, president of the Seafarers International Union, with headquarters in San Francisco, in which he said his union of 40,000 will "absolutely and definitely not cooperate" in WSA's plan to examine medically all merchant seamen shipping out to sea, beginning Wednesday, December 1.

Ready to Sail Ships

2. Captain Macauley answered Lundeberg with a telegram yesterday in which he said a direct refusal to comply with WSA's order "will not be tolerated" and made it clear that WSA was ready to sail the ships in case of a strike.

3. The Washington representative of the Seafarers will outline the union's opposition to WSA's medical program at a meeting today of Government officials and representatives of other maritime unions in the War Shipping Administration.

Lundeberg, Norway-born leader of AFL seamen on the West Coast, is also secretary-treasurer of the Sailor's Union of the Pacific.

Old Timers Barred

In his letter, the tone of which Captain Macauley termed "pretty serious," Lundeberg charges that the WSA program will eliminate the "old sea dogs" from the industry and that the proposed examinations discriminates against old-timers who cannot meet strict physical requirements.

The union leader's letter is loaded with invectives. He attacks the proposed order as a "medical scheme" worked out by a "bunch of $10,000-a-year stiffs." The Seafarers Union, he said, embraces 40,000 merchant seamen on some 900 ships on the West Coast alone.

Captain Macauley called members of the press into his office to announce he had sent a tlegram to Lundeberg and to explain the WSA program for examining seamen.

"There will be no interference with the 'old sea dogs', said Captain Macauley. 'We have no intention of using this order to eliminate those men; they are too valuable to us."

The program, he said, is designed to weed out merchant sailors with venereal disease, who are a threat to other crew members, food handlers aboard ship and to troops in transport.

His Only Objection

"Some unions have encouraged the proposed medical exams," said Macauley. "Lundeberg's is the only out-and-out objection WSA knows of."

Asked what action would be taken if the union strikes, Macauley said, "WSA will sail the ships even if it has to call upon the Army and Navy."

In his telegram, Macauley reminded Lundeberg that the WSA had the power to do so under the presidential order of February 7, 1942.

"We have men on hand to sail the ships—and competent men," Macauley said.

WSA training programs, it was said, have recruited 25,000 new seamen and the Merchant Marine has grown from 70,000 sailors before the war to 125,000.

Morgenthau Stands Pat on 10 Billion Tax Plan

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau jr., yesterday confronted the Senate Finance committee with minimum Treasury demands for a 10½ billion dollar increase in taxes, refusing to revise downward a penny the Administration's original estimates.

"It is a great fallacy to suppose that we can fight history's greatest war to have what we hold most dear without financial sacrifice," he told the Senate group sitting in judgment on a House-passed $2,140,000,000 bill.

Opposes Sales Tax

Opposing a sales tax as "the least desirable of all methods of raising additional revenue," Morgenthau presented substantially the same program of heightened taxes that the House whittled down to less than a fourth. He said the American people are well able to pay the full amount "needed to safeguard the financial and economic future of this country."

He warned: "Day after day, the continuous pressure of spending power has been cracking our price controls a little here and a little there and threaten to produce a major breakdown. We are courting danger if we do not do all that is possible through the tax mechanism to strengthen the foundations of our stabilization program."

Morgenthau told the committee the House tax bill is not "a realistic or courageous" solution of the Nation's fiscal needs. At an afternoon session Treasury General Counsel Randolph Paul heartily seconded his chief.

Paul lashed out particularly at House provisions for a minimum 3 per cent tax after special exemptions ($500 for single persons, $700 for married, plus $100 credit for each dependent) on incomes of about nine million persons freed from the victory tax but with salaries too low to be touched by the regular income levies.

The Treasury counsel said dual exemptions embodied in the change and an involved choice between separate and joint returns "erects a mountain of complexity for a mole hill of revenue ($161 million dollars)." Paul maintained "it is not an overstatement to say that its complexities will jeopardize the whole income tax system."

Faced with a practical certainty that the Senate will not materially increase the tax bill unless the Administration accepts a sales tax, Morgenthau was put over the jumps on the issue by Senators Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia and Vandenberg (Republican) of Michigan.

"No Phobia"

Byrd asked the Secretary if his opposition to a sales tax was so great that he preferred the $2,140,000,000 revenue in the House bill to an increased Senate measure providing retail sales taxes.

Morgenthau replied he had "no phobia" against a sales tax but felt it lacked any relation to ability to pay and would yield far less revenue after inevitable congressional exemptions for food, medicine and clothing than the six billion dollar yield that has been estimated for a flat 10 per cent tax. The Secretary predicted the yield would finally come down to about $1,400,000,000.

Leading members of the committee said his renewed stand against a sales levy probably will end the committee's search in that direction. Members of the group have frequently taken the position that it would be futile to pass a sales tax if it means a presidential veto.

Morgenthau vigorously denied that Budget Director Harold Smith's estimate of a 57 billion dollar deficit this year, instead of the expected deficit of 68 billion dollars, changed the need for another 10½ billion in taxes. Senator Clark (Democrat) of Missouri reminded him that the Treasury nonetheless was "11 billion dollars better off."

"Yes, but 57 billion dollars still is a hell of a deficit in anybody's language," replied Morgenthau. He predicted the public debt would rise to about 200 billion dollars by the end of this fiscal year, with interest charges alone of nearly four billion a year.

Plan to Amend Soldier Vote Bill Defeated

By the Associated Press

A Republican attempt to alter the form of the servicemen's vote bill was defeated by Senate Democrats yesterday by the barest of margins, a tie vote 33 to 33 sidetracking an amendment to require the presidential appointments to a proposed war ballot commission be made from lists submitted by the major parties.

In its present form the bill would set up a bi-partisan commission of four members to supervise absentee balloting in next year's general election by members of the armed forces.

Senator Bridges (Republican) of New Hampshire proposed the amendment with the declaration that he didn't want any "pinkish" or "New Dealish" Republicans named to the commission, particularly if President Roosevelt is to seek a fourth term.

Senator Lucas (Democrat) of Illinois, one of the author's of the measure, called this amendment "a reflection on the President of the United States" and said that "Bridges seemed to fear that some one was trying to pack the ballot commission.

Senators Eastland (Democrat) of Mississippi and Smith (Democrat) of South Carolina objected especially to a provision which would waive State eligibility requirements, except those of age and residence, in permitting uniformed personnel to cast absentee ballots in Federal races next November.

Calling the measure a "first step toward Federal control of the entire election machinery of this country," Eastland shouted:

"You'll send carpetbaggers into the South to control elections under this bill."

Eastland contended that persons not qualified to vote under their State laws could cast ballots under the bill as it stands and asserted that the powers of the proposed war ballot commission would be unlimited.

"There is no greed in the world comparable to the greed of Government commissions for power," he thundered.

Breaking in at this point, Senator Lucas (Democrat) of Illinois, one of the authors of the measure, shouted back:

"You disenfranchise seven million soldiers and tell them that!"

Midway Veteran Admits Slaying His Sweetheart

New Orleans, Nov. 29 (AP).—A frail 20-year-old veteran of the Battle of Midway who told officers "I lost my head," was questioned today in connection with the strangling to death last night of his sweetheart, 17, in a parked automobile.

The tall youth, Irvin McCafferty Cummins, son of a university professor, was said to have admitted the slaying.

"I don't know what happened to me. We were in love and I lost my head, he said.

The victim was Miss Joan Lewis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Lewis of New Orleans to whom Cummins said he was to have been married in about a year.

Coolidge, Wilson Play for D. C. Title Today

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

We were tempted at first to tap out some indignant paragraphs scorching the hides off the unfeeling dopes who aimed the Bronx cheer at Sammy Baugh in the last quarter Sunday against the Phil-Pitts. Somehow, though, our enthusiasm for being outraged began to leak.

POVICH

On second thought, the boo is not nearly as disrespectful as it used to be. In late years it has almost qualified as typically American, connotating an insistence on freedom of expression. As directed at Baugh, it was probably nothing personal at all, just a device of the grandstand quarterbacks to convey their displeasure at what was going on. That seems to be an inalienable right.

Baugh has been a great guy, and still is, and there's no dispute about it, but he pays the penalty of being Baugh. The peepul booed Babe Ruth, too. Like Ruth, Baugh's very eminence makes him a target. There are no boos for the left guard who gets smacked down and lets a touchdown play roll over him. There are no cheers, for him, either, when he stops a play. The left guard is too inconspicuous and is lost in the shuffle, but Baugh is always out in front.

The trouble is that Baugh has spoiled the Redskins' fans with his great skill. When he isn't throwing touchdown passes consistently, they peeve easily. In Sunday's case, though, the boos weren't actually directed at Baugh as he went into the game to relieve Cafego at quarterback. It was mostly a rebuke to the master minding on the Redskins' bench.

Actually, the folks who were incited to boos as Cafego came out and Baugh went in might have been very sporting-minded and were resenting the Redskins' strategy. You could read into their boos a deep compliment to Cafego, the sub, who had just taken the Redskins far down field with a 37-yard pass to Frank Seno. Now Cafego was coming out and Baugh was going in. The fans who booed simply didn't like it. The boos weren't exactly vicious. If they weren't pulling for a Redskin victory, they wouldn't have been interested enough to boo.

It all ended up very nicely, though. Cafego got a great hand for the job he had been doing. Baugh went in, completely undisturbed by the Bronx cheers, and demonstrated again his ability to rise to the occasion by throwing a touchdown pass to Aguirre on the very next play. And the Redskin coaches were completely vindicated. Unquestionably the same fans who had been booing were now cheering, so what is there to get excited about?

The Redskins lost Sunday's game with the Phil-Pitts before the season started, when they traded Roy Zimmerman to the Steagles. The Redskins didn't need Zimmerman, sure enough, what with Baugh around, but smart operators shy away from bolstering other clubs in the same section of the league. Zimmerman made a title threat out of the Phil-Pitts.

The Steagles' T-formation as designed by Greasy Neale was nothing less than magnificent. It seems to be an improvement even over the Bears' version. Neale gets a greater concentration of power by dispensing with the man in motion, and it makes for more deception, too, with three backs, often four, figuring in the close-knit sleight-of-hand behind the line.

Neale came up with sweep plays that the Bears never did develop. Zimmerman, after the play was under way, had his choice of lateraling the ball to any back, and on the second touchdown play his faking was extremely clever. The lanky Steagle quarterback, with the ball on the Redskins' 4-yard line, made a motion to give the ball to Hinkle, his right halfback, and then actually back-handed it to Bob Thurston, the left-half, who crossed on the opposite side and found such a big hole awaiting that he almost catapulted into the baseball dugout behind the visitors' bench.

The game was one of the worst games the Redskins ever played, and it was their own fault, of course. It was the Redskins who started the rough stuff. They were overanxious to smear the Steagles, who merely stuck to football. The Redskins, as is always the case of a team that set out to get tough, drew penalties, ten of 'em, that didn't hurt the Steagles any.

Finally, the Steagles got their first touchdown and the pressure was off. The Redskins didn't react like a good ball team. They tried to do too much. Eagles about, but that was a poor substitute for skill. The Steagles, incidentally, are no longer the roughest team in the league. The Redskins are, and have been for a couple of years.

Wilkin deserved the heave-ho he got from the officials in the third period. Less deserved was the ejection also of Ben Kish, Steagle tackle. What happened was all Wilkin's fault. Graves of the Steagles had just tackled Bob Masterson on a pass play. There didn't seem to be anything vicious about it. The whistle had blown, the play was long since over, when 265-pound Wilkin came galloping up and hit Kish. It was uncalled-for, and so Kish, who was standing by, took a poke at Wilkin that was almost justifiable.

With CONSIDINE

Bill Considine, who took a temporary leave of absence from "On the Line" to become a war correspondent, is back in the United States after a tour of duty in Britain, where for several months he covered the activities of the U. Nov. 29.—The opening of the skiing season brings to mind that this sport has just about produced more fighting men per yard of snow, than any other sport in existence.

Emphasizing the need for keeping physically fit during these trying times, the National Ski Association of America and its seven affiliated groups have contributed an entire division to the Army. The division is known as the "Fighting Mountaineers."

Lieut. Dallas Clinger, former Washington State College ski ace received the DFC from Maj. Gen. Claire Chennault for streaking into a formation of 23 Japanese Zeros, shooting one of them down, damaging several others badly, and turning the group formation into a chaos. Flying a Warhawk fighter, Clinger saved the life of a flying buddy threatening to collide head-on with a Zero when the latter had the buddy squarely in its gunsights. Clinger's ship safely home, as full of holes as a sponge.

Purple Heart, has had his packed parachute shot by an explosive bullet, once was strafed for a field (he dodged from one rock to another, with agility), once flattened out in a totally bare field on which unloaded sticks of bombs in the field, and had a delayed action bomb with his jungle knife which he laconically called "a safe spot to explode."

Capt. MacNab Emery, who was known as Tuffy while with the New York chapter of the Appalachian Club, was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for action in North Africa on the opening day of the invasion. A machine-gun nest single-handed. He was armed only with a gun.

He was fearless and no man ever died with greater courage, Roosevelt wrote the Appalachian club. "He was the finest man I ever known. He was clean, simple, valiant, and endless in faith and fame." Emery's charge displayed courage enough to enable the Americans to outflank and wipe it out.

Capt. Emery's eight quenceless fame to his favorite sport was matched by that of the Eighth Air Force. The 24-year-old Dartmouth man was discovered after getting his loaded Fortress off on a return mission over Europe, that the plane had suffered a take-off accident. A member of the crew had climbed to height and ordered the wounded man to bail out. Then he piloted the bomber out over the Channel with the dangerous load. He swung back to the field and ordered the members of the crew including the co-pilot, to take to the sea. He took back out over the Channel, knowing that if he crashed at the field it might cause death and destruction to others. He put the ship down in the water, finally, and was picked up by a rescue boat.

(Capt. Bright, member of the 1936 American Olympic team and holder of many downhill records including the one at Woodstock, Vt., is listed as an intelligence officer with the Air Force. He is no chicken, but the desk job palled

Wills Comes Back to Beat Cat Robinson

By Al Costello

Washington's Frankie Wills, 150, D. C. welterweight champion, came off the floor twice last night at Uline Arena to turn back hard-hitting Ernest (Cat) Robinson, 147, New York Negro, as 2270 fans who paid $3676 for the privilege, booed with vigor.

The boos, however, could be traced, not to the decision, which plainly belonged to Wills, but for the manner in which Frankie had to resort to score. As it was, Referee Eddie LaFond and Judge Frank Schuyler voted for Wills while Judge Dr. O. U. Singer, voted for "The Cat."

Knocked down in the second and again in the fifth for one counts, Wills was the loser at the halfway mark. Robinson's slashing left hook was making trouble and plenty of it for Wills, who seemed powerless to get out of its way. In the second it was a hard left to the tummy which put Wills down. In the fifth, with Wills back against the ropes, the "Cat" brought one home to the chin which dazed Wills and sent him to the floor again.

'Cat' Kept Off Balance

Then Frankie seemed to find the right combination. By the simple process of staying on top of Robinson, coming in fast before "The Cat" could start his charge, Frankie kept a jabbing left in the Negro's face which kept him off balance. From the knock-down at the start of the fifth until near the end of the seventh, the "Cat" failed to land a telling punch.

In beating Robinson to the punch and tying him up so that his lethal left was virtually useless, Wills half the time had to slide into a clinch. Frankie's left was good for nothing but a stabbing instrument and did not contain the punch Robinson's did. At times Wills crossed a right to Robinson's head that scored valuable points, but did not faze the "Cat."

From the sixth to the tenth, with Wills constantly on top and going into his necessary clinches, the fight slowed to a walk. Robinson's right was either practically useless or horribly ineffective for he chose to rely on his left all the way and thereby lost once Wills reached the happy solution.

Unspectacular Toward End

It wasn't the best fight in the world to watch after the fifth round, but Wills demonstrated he uses his head for something besides a punching target in solving the "Cat's" style and going on to win—even if it was unspectacular. And he won, regardless.

On The Post score sheet, Robinson was given three of the first five rounds, all he was credited with. Wills took the remaining seven and piled up a total of 91 points to the "Cat's" 81.

Vic Creelman, 135, sensational New York sailor, won his twenty-ninth straight victory, taking a close eight-round decision over Washington's Billy Banks, 137, in the semifinal.

Primarily a battle of left hands, it was Creelman's telling use of a hard crossing right, which several times staggered the local Negro, that decided the bout in his favor. Referee Eddie LaFond and Judge Frank Schuyler voted for Creelman while Judge Dr. O. U. Singer called it a draw.

Twice, Banks' slashing lefts drew blood, once from a jagged cut under Creelman's left eye in the sixth which might have proved disastrous if Banks had continued to poke at the injury. But Creelman foxed his way out of trouble and protected himself carefully the rest of the way.

White Outpoints Powell

Sailor Eddie White, 197, New York, won his fifth straight local victory here, outpointing "Li'l Abner" Powell, Aberdeen Negro soldier, M. P., but failed to increase his knockout string which had reached four in a row.

White stayed on top all the way, forcing the fight and landing harder and oftener, and was clearly superior in the infighting. Powell looked sluggish.

In the opening four, Bee Bee Washington, 160, of D. C. pounded out a clean victory over George Williams, 156, Baltimore.

Brunowicz to Meet 'Angel' at Arena

Frank Brunowicz, veteran wrestling campaigner, comes back to familiar scenes at Turner's Arena on Thursday night's show featuring the Original Angel, Maurice Tillet, and the Black Mask, hooded grappler.

Brunowicz, once a great drawing card at the Washington Auditorium, will meet Chief Bamba Tabu, the Oklahoma Indian, in a 30-minute match.

Bramham's NAPBC Post Is Challenged

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—The battle over government of the Nation's minor league baseball, which has been brewing behind closed doors for weeks, broke out into the open at the winter meetings today with definite and organized opposition to reelection of William G. Bramham as "boss of the minors."

Ending the whispers and rumors that had been running wild throughout the first day of the week-long major and minor league sessions, the International League, one of the three double-A loops in organized ball—wound up a five-hour huddle by coming out flatly for its own president, Frank J. (Shag) Shaughnessy, to succeed the 63-year-old Bramham, who has been head of the minor league set-up for 12 years.

Giants Seek Novikoff

This action, naming Shaughnessy as a candidate to oppose the white-haired North Carolinian as president of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues at the big meeting Wednesday, was the standout development of a day which saw little if any major league action.

The only whispers of trade winds were: (1) the New York Giants might try to deal with the Chicago Cubs for Lou Novikoff; (2) Detroit and Cleveland might get together on a deal by which the Indians' pitcher, Jim Bagby, would go to the Tigers for an outfielder, and (3) the Phillies want at least two ball players.

Although the International League is one of the most powerful in baseball, the nomination of Shaughnessy indicated a bitter fight on the meeting floor Wednesday. Before the International League action, the Southern Association, a class A-1 loop, had come out flatly in favor of reelecting Bramham for his fourth term as National Association president. The American Association, which is expected to follow the International League's lead, wound up its meeting with an announcement that it had not discussed a "rival candidate" for president, but that it would hold another session tomorrow. The association voted to play a full 154-game schedule next summer.

Voting Power Challenged

On top of its nomination of Shaughnessy for the $25,000-a-year job, the International League blew the minor league powder keg apart by flatly opposing a return of voting privileges to 16 minor leagues which did not operate in 1943, but which paid their National Association dues and maintained their territorial rights. The voting privileges of these 16 were taken away by a vote of the nine minor loops which did operate in '43, and the entire 16, headed by the Texas league, is ready to fight it out Wednesday, even if it means taking the brawl to High Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis.

The return of the 16 to the voting fold figures to help Bramham, for most of them are in the "C" and "D" classification, which probably would be opposed to the move of the double-A loops.

The entire fight, as a matter of

Dutch Bergman Forgets Bears, Points Redskins for Giants

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

"Everything goes against the New York Giants Sunday," Redskin Coach Dutch Bergman was saying yesterday. "Everything. We've got to win that game and get this thing over with." And Dutch referred, of course, to the Eastern Division race which the Redskins can clinch by winning or tying one of the New York games.

Bergman hinted that if necessary his best men would play the entire game. After the licking at the hands of the Phil-Pitt Eagles Sunday in which the 'Skins showed they were only human and can play some horrible football, Dutch is inclined to forget the pending play-off with the Chicago Bears on December 19 and concentrate on tucking away the Eastern pennant.

The Redskin mentor was not too disturbed about the Eagle loss. Sure, he'd like to win them all, but after all since the league was divided into sections in 1933 only the 19344 Chicago Bears and last year's edition of the same club went through the league season without a defeat, and in both those years the Bears lost the championship game. Which means no team has won every league game and the title play-off in one season, and that will hold true this year.

Scouts Due a Hand

Bergman and Line Coach Turk Edwards spent last evening with Dr. Clarence Spears, University of Maryland coach and Vince McNally, of the Georgetown Physical training staff who comprised a two-man scouting staff at the Giant-Dodger game. Spears, who scouted for years for the Green Bay Packers, and McNally, who earned a reputation as scout for Clipper Smith at Villanova, are due a hand for the Redskin successes to date and nobody realizes this more than Bergman.

Jack Lavelle, the big fellow who is a constant visitor to press boxes in this section scouting the Redskins for the New York Giants and Navy for Notre Dame shows a little partiality, of course, but he is a firm believer in the possibilities of the Giants. Lavelle talks in terms of the Giants winning both games and forcing a playoff for the Eastern Division title.

The Giants will hardly catch the Redskins displaying the brand of football they showed against the Eagles, however. After their magnificent performances against the Packers and Bears in league games the 'Skins have come up with sad letdowns against the Cardinals and Eagles, but they are due for a better day next Sunday. And don't forget the Eagle game was just a week after the Redskins met the Bears and, win or lose, the Bears still take a lot out of a team for the next several days.

Several Men Slowed Up

Lou Rymkus and Joe Pasqua, who were shoved around a bit by the Eagle linemen Sunday, were both below par physically, as was Willie Wilkin. Dick Farman didn't play. They were all slowed up with assorted hurts and could not effectively combat the charging and cross-checking of the Eagle linemen. Wilkin and Clyde Shugart missed almost half the game, but in fairness to the Eagles they had done most of the damage before Wilkin and Shugart were banished.

If nothing else, the Redskins' meetings with teams using the T-formation prove war bonds are a much safer investment than betting on professional football. The Bears murdered the Eagles, '48 to 21, the Redskins routed the Bears, 21 to 7, and the Eagles turned against the Redskins, 27 to 14.

Tech Jackets Boast Point Total of 280

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Nov. 29.—To back up their first to play undefeated Tulsa in the Sugar Bowl, Georgia Tech's Yellow Jackets today were able to point to a 10-game scoring total of 280 points, a record of seven victories and three defeats without a shutout—and to Eddie Prokop.

Big Eddie has been tossing touchdown passes all season. Saturday when the Jackets humbled Georgia's Bulldogs 48-0, the worst beating in the two schools' ancient rivalry, he scored three times himself and added his usual extra points, six in number this time.

The victory, avenging last year's 34-0 triumph by Georgia's Rose Bowl champions, gave Tech an undisputed title to the wartime Southeastern Conference unofficial football crown.

The Jackets already had soundly whipped each of the other two teams playing a conference schedule. The Bulldogs finished without a conference win, their 0-3 record being the reverse of Tech's, while neither Louisiana State, Orange Bowl opponent of the Texas Aggies, nor Tulane did better than break even.

Tech's New Year's Day invitation to New Orleans was extended and accepted two weeks ago but no announcement was made until after Saturday's traditional battle with Georgia.

Giants' End Adams Suffers Broken Jaw

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—O'Neale Adams, regular end of the New York Giants professional football team, suffered a double fracture of the jaw in Sunday's game against the Brooklyn Dodgers, Coach Steve Owen said today.

The loss is a blow to Giant hopes of beating the Washington Redskins here Sunday. The Giants must win to stay in the running for the Eastern division title.

Navy Coach Replacement Is Tar Topic

Annapolis, Nov. 29 (AP).—The excitement over Navy's 13-0 defeat of Army died away today in Crabtown, and talk turned to speculation about who will replace Capt. John E. Whelchel as head coach of the Middies' football team.

Whelchel, who also is director of athletics, has requested active sea duty and is expected to depart within a month. There have been reports he would be replaced by some former Navy football star now commanding fleet units.

One source, pointing to the success of graduate coaches in recent years, declared the athletic department is sold on the idea of academy-trained men continuing in the chief coaching role.

As a yardstick, they look back upon five straight Navy victories over Army and, as far as the Middies are concerned, any Navy team that beats Army has had a successful season.

Capt. Owen Humphrey, baseball and basketball star at the academy in 1918-19, was mentioned today for director of athletics, a post that was separate from head coach prior to this year.

Arkansas Aggies, SLI to Play in Houston Oil Bowl

Houston, Tex., Nov. 29 (AP).—Southwestern Louisiana Institute and Arkansas A. and M. will play a New Year's Day football game here, Dick Freeman of the war sports committee said today.

The game will be called the "Oil Bowl Classic."

Southwestern Louisiana of Lafayette, is the only undefeated team in the Southwest.

John Dennis Dies; Ex-Duckpin Head

Roanoke, Va., Nov. 29 (AP).—John Y. Dennis, 56, former president of the National Duckpin Bowling Congress, died today at the United States veterans' hospital here. He was a native of York, Pa.

He had made his home in Norfolk in recent years where he wrote many articles on bowling. He organized the first Norfolk women's duckpin teams which he coached to a national championship. He also was associated with Ida Simmons, Norfolk's national women's duckpin singles champion for seven years.

Two Tiger Linemen Out, Coach Says

By Tom Moore McBride

The District interhigh football season will end with a game at 3:30 p. m. today when the locally unbeaten Coolidge Colts meet runner-up Woodrow Wilson in the championship play-off at Central Staduim.

The game will be somewhat anti-climactic, for Coolidge already has beaten Wilson in series play, but that was at the beginning of the season and the Tigers have improved immeasurably since then. Wilson showed its mettle last week, especially, when its players showed more speed and versatility than they had all season in beating Tech, 12-0, in a tie play-off.

Bassin to Play

Coolidge will probably take the edge in star manpower available, for Addie Bassin is due to play for the Colts, while the Tigers may have two members of their regular starting line-up on the sidelines.

Since Bassin's injury in the Western game 10 days ago, George Lentz, George Washington University trainer, has been working on his torn shoulder muscles daily. Lentz and Coach Gil Conn have devised a sponge rubber pad to protect the shoulder, and chances are the city's best broken field runner will be in there catching passes from John Shullenbarger.

Wilson's vaunted line may start without two of its mainstays, Tackle Tom Brewer and Guard Gordon O'Neill. The latter is definitely out of the game.

O'Neill Missed

The loss of O'Neill will be a crippling blow indeed, for Gordon probably has made more tackles for the Tigers during the season than any other single player. Somehow he always seems to be where the ball carrier is. Brewer also is a top defensive player, and probably won't be able to play a full game.

Brightening the otherwise dark picture is the fact that Pearce Godfrey, passing and kicking back who has been ailing for some time, probably will be back in the line-up for at least part of the game. And with Russell Keith and Stu Brown in the Wilson backfield, it's far from a crippled team.

E. F. Russell, 16, Receives NRA's Rifleman Award

E. F. Russell, 16, 3705 Reservoir rd. nw., has been awarded the distinguished rifleman gold bar, highest marksmanship honor bestowed by the National Rifle Association, the NRA junior division announced yesterday.

Russell, in achieving rank with the best riflemen in the Nation, passed a strenuous 15-part test, proving his ability in the four standard shooting positions—prone, sitting, kneeling and standing—over a 50-foot indoor course.

Russell's marksmanship achievement came when he developed an average of a minimum 90 per cent accuracy in the prone and sitting positions and 80 per cent in the kneeling and standing positions, firing 100 shots in each position. Only 48 distinguished riflemen have been so designated by the NRA this year.

Bill Henry to Speak To Touchdowners

Bill Henry, widely known radio newscaster and sports columnist, will discuss "Americans in Sport" when he addresses the weekly luncheon of the Touchdown Club at 12:30 p. m. today.

Henry has visited every war front in the world and is familiar with the great records compiled by athletes in Uncle Sam's armed services.

He was technical director of the Olympic games in Los Angeles in 1932, and was an early advocate of athletics for conditioning and as a morale booster.

Nyleve Wins Inaugural at Charles Town

Balloter Leader in Early Drive

By Walter Haight

Charles Town, W. Va., Nov. 29.—The Eastern racing season entered its final phase today as 3500 customers watched the opening program of the 17-day session. The Inaugural Purse, featuring the card, brought a thrilling finish with Nyleve, owned by Miss Ethel Smith of Baltimore, taking a head decision in a photo.

Second money went to Dr. G. T. Strother's Phantom Player, four lengths in advance of H. Lataner's Balloter. A field of seven competed in the test of a mile and a sixteenth.

With Balloter installed as favorite, Nyleve returned $14.60. The 4-year-old son of Red Reigh was well handled by Jockey Willie Rudert and was clocked in 1:46 2-5 over a fast track. Betting was as brisk as the weather.

Nyleve Away on Top

Rudert took Nyleve away on top but steadied the gelding when Phantom Player was urged into command. On the backstretch, Rudert put Nyleve to a drive and the Smith representative gained gradually. In the stretch, Rudert went to the whip and Nyleve gradually wore down the front runner. Balloter moved up menacingly but hung in the final drive.

Favorite players, while beaten in the feature, had their innings. The program opened with Mrs. Arthur White's Milk Chocolate, twice a winner at Marlboro, making it three straight. The daughter of Milkman scored by a length and a half over Mrs. J. M. Welsh's Attune with Mrs. A. A. Wesley's Double B third. Milk Chocolate paid $3.20.

H. T. Rorabaugh's Part One proved another oddson winner in the second and put the finishing touches on a $7.60 payoff in the daily double. Carson Kirk rode Part One home some ten lengths in front of Henry Virginia's Vale Dove, one that was off poorly. Third money went to Van Wert's Lady Divine.

Leo's Lorraine Wins

The Washington-owned colors of Mrs. Esther Warren were victorious in the third event. Leo's Lorraine, also ridden by Jockey Rudart, scampered in front of Mrs. Gordon Pearce's Two Fold with Dr. H. B. Langdon's local hope, Leaping Moose, third. Leo's Lorraine, two-time winner at Marlboro, paid $6.80.

Danny Scocca, Washington boy, rode his first winner aboard the Alpine Farm's Anthem, a $3 public choice in the fourth race.

Won When They Scored

Annapolis, Md. (AP).—Navy won every football game in which the Middies scored at least one touchdown during 1942. Still they lost four of nine starts.

Richmond U.'s Lawler Leads South Scorers

Richmond, Va., Nov. 29 (AP).—Courtney Lawler, University of Richmond fullback, staged a two-touchdown spurt in the Spiders' final game to take over the individual scoring leadership in the Southern Conference with 48 points.

Scoring twice as the Spiders bested the Charleston (S. C.) Coast Guard, 20 to 6, for their sixth straight triumph of the season, Lawler nosed out Duke University's Bob Gantt by a single point. Gantt, end and place-kicking specialist, tallied one touchdown and made good 41 conversions in 46 attempts for a season's total of 47 points and runner-up honors in the loop's scoring race.

Lawler, a 175-pounder from Clifton Forge, is a ministerial student at Richmond and was the only letterman returning to the campus from last year's squad.

Lawler's 48 points were the lowest to win high scoring position in the conference in many years, due to the fact that schedules were curtailed and that some of the high scorers of the first half of the season left school with the V-12 transfers before the end of the season. Richmond played only seven contests.

fact, involved a hot scramble over votes and voting eligibility. But it had become so hot that it overshadowed everything else at the meetings, even though the outlook for baseball in 1944 apparently was brighter, since the International League, the American Association and the Southern Association all voted full schedules for next season.

And of course, there was considerable chatter over the outlook or lack of it—for manpower for the 1944 campaign, and some few moguls looking at the darker side even saw the possibility that the schedule may be shortened next season.

Carpenter, Pennock To Talk Terms Today

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—Robert Carpenter, jr., new president of the Philadelphia Phillies, came to the annual winter baseball meetings today and said he would do nothing about new material for his club until he finds out tomorrow whether Herb Pennock will accept the job as general manager.

Pennock, one-time southpaw ace of the American League, has been head of the Boston Red Sox farm system in recent years.

Marlboro Jockey To Get Hearing on Race Fix Charge

Marlboro, Md., Nov. 29 (AP).—A hearing was scheduled tomorrow by the Maryland Racing Commission for Jockey M. Quinn following a report of stewards that he attempted to bribe another rider to "pull" a horse in the fifth race at Marlboro Track Saturday in the closing day of the meeting.

Stewards Ty Shea, William Harron and Judge John Turner, jr., ordered Quinn suspended pending the hearing which was announced by George P. Mahoney, racing commission member.

Mahoney said Jockey J. Pannell signed a statement accusing Quinn of offering $50 if he would pull White Sea in the fifth race. Pannell rode White Sea to victory.

Southwestern Accepts El Paso Sun Bowl Bid

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 29 (AP).—Southwestern University of Georgetown, Tex., will meet the University of New Mexico in the 1944 Sun Bowl football game New Year's Day, M. L. Hutchins of the Sun Bowl committee said today.

The Southwestern Pirates are primarily composed of Marine trainees. They had the best 1943 college record in Texas, winning nine games, tying one and losing one. They defeated the University of Texas, hosts in the Dallas Cotton Bowl, 14 to 7.

Minnesota Won't Play Big V-12 Teams

Minneapolis, Nov. 29 (AP).—Athletic Director Lou Keller of the University of Minnesota said today that the Gophers will not schedule any more football games like those which this year pitted 17-year-olds against teams loaded with former professionals.

Keller said that officials in the Minnesota athletic department believe "it is ridiculous to expect boys just out of high school to be able to put up a good game against men 5 to 10 years their senior, and with that much additional grid experience."

Luckman Swing Costs Baker $50

Chicago, Nov. 29 (AP).—Conway Baker, veteran Chicago Cardinals guard, was fined $50 today by Commissioner Elmer Layden of the National Football League for taking a swing at Sid Luckman of the Bears during yesterday's Cardinal-Bear game at Comiskey Park.

Baksi Kayoes Walker

Baltimore, Nov. 29 (AP).—Slugging Joe Baksi, Kulpmont, Pa., heavyweight, knocked out Buddy Walker, Columbus, Ohio, Negro, in the fifth round of a scheduled 12-round bout tonight.

on him. "Grandpa" wanted action, so one day not long ago he embarked on a mission over the Lorient U-boat bases, which the Germans protect fanatically.

The Fortress dropped its pickles and started for home, but just as it did so a 20-mm-shell from an attacking Focke Wulf blew the top off the cockpit, seriously wounding the pilot and co-pilot and knocking out the ship's oxygen lines.

The co-pilot took over while Captain Bright set about feeding oxygen to the pilot from an emergency "bottle," and giving him the first aid treatment he had learned as a national ski patrolman. The job was made more difficult by the savage assaults of the FW's. Captain Bright left the wounded man repeatedly to man a machine gun and helped shoot down the three planes credited to the bomber that grueling day.

Bright was an officer in World War 1, and is a Boston banker-broker. But skiing kept him in shape during the generation of peace and today he's doing work that would exhaust a man half as old.

No More Shells This Year, But Increase Seen for 1944

Representative A. Willis Robertson (Democrat) of Virginia said yesterday that while the War Production Board saw no chance to better the lot of hunters this year it had promised to start immediately a program for a more liberal allotment of rifle and shotgun shells for the 1944 hunting season.

Robertson, as chairman of the select House Committee on Wildlife Conservation, has been discussing with the WPB and the Army-Navy Munitions Board the possibility of increasing supplies of small arms ammunition for hunters during the current season.

No More for the Season

He said he was advised by the WPB that even though additional production could be authorized, additional shells could not be furnished in time for use during the current season, the Associated Press reported.

Government agencies having charge of the distribution of shotgun shells for civilian use, he said, authorized the distribution of approximately 100 million shells, one half of which were distributed prior to October 1, 1943.

The remaining 50 million were to be manufactured by the Remington and Winchester groups, he said, the Winchester group had shipped through normal distribution channels 92 per cent, and the Remington group 96 per cent, of their quotas. Both groups will complete their shipments on or before December 1, Robertson said.

No War Department Objection

Robertson said his committee ascertained some weeks ago that the War Department was "well up" on its small arms ammunition program and had no objection to existing facilities being used for the manufacture of an additional supply of shotgun shells for civilian use.

Upon receipt of such information, the committee took up with the WPB the question of authorizing such additional production.

Bainbridge Names Md. Man Best Linesman

Bainbridge, Md., Nov. 29 (AP).—Fred Dobler, halfback of the Curtis Bay Coast Guard Cutters, and Pete Karangelin, University of Maryland guard, were named today by the Bainbridge football team as the best back and lineman faced by the Commodores this season.

The undefeated Commodores voted Camp LeJeune Marines as the toughest opponent, and picked four players from the New River, N. C., outfit on their all-opponent team.

Howie Gentry, Negro tackle from Camp Lee, Va., and Russ Monica, Curtis Bay guard, gave Karangelin a bit of competition in the voting, but Dobler, former North Dakota star, won the backfield honors without opposition.

PROOF OF MILEAGE-
for the new General
from American-Made* Rubber

As soon as they built the first new Generals, from American-Made rubber . . . they started testing them, of course, on special factory machines that reproduce many times over the hardest punishment anybody can give a tire.

But they didn't stop there. They put them on test cars in the Mojave Desert on 24-hour runs—through hot sun and cold nights. And they put them on taxicabs—for the hardest kind of city driving.

So—General Tire ought to know what the new General will do. And, they tell us it delivers the same kind of mileage and safety Generals always have!

*Synthetic rubber—created from American raw materials—by American chemical research and American production genius.

The GENERAL TIRE

Shortage of Tires Continues

Some civilian tires are being made—but, military needs come first. It will be a long time before everybody can have today's new Top-Quality General. So—make your present tires last. December Auto Quota Fixed At 15,500, Lowest Ration Yet

The lowest quota of new passenger autos in almost two years of rationing was announced yesterday by the Office of Price Administration as 15,500 vehicles for December.

The new car quota, smallest since the start of rationing represents a reduction of 25 per cent from the November quota of 20,600, which was a cut of almost 35 per cent from the October figure.

The continued reductions, OPA said, reflect the policy of spreading out the remaining supply of new autos as long as possible for essential purposes. Since no new cars have been manufactured since early 1942, dealers' stocks have gradually dwindled, with the result that monthly quotas had to be reduced accordingly.

An additional reserve quota of 3015 autos was set by OPA to meet unforeseen emergency local needs.

In the District, local War Price and Rationing Boards can issue 84 new cars to eligible applicants next month. The reduction in the quota here is about 20 per cent below November.

The District's reserve was set at five cars.

Meanwhile it was learned the Office of Defense Transportation is preparing a five-point program for motorists to follow in keeping their cars rolling this winter. The program is designed to prevent unnecessary calls for service and to aid motorists in areas where there is a critical shortage of manpower for repair work.

Buffalo-Ottowa Route Approval Is Asked by PCA

Permission to extend its lines from Buffalo to Ottawa was sought of the Civil Aeronautics Board by Pennsylvania-Central Airlines in a petition filed yesterday.

Airline authorities cited the fact that no air link services the capitals of the United States and Canada.

The proposed extension is a continuance of the Airline's Washington-Buffalo air run and, if granted, would be linked with the present PCA route from Pittsburgh to Buffalo.

The new line would run from Washington through Baltimore, Harrisburg and Williamsport, Pa., to Buffalo for the hop into Canada.

Thieves Open Furniture Store Safe, Get $62

Morris Liss, proprietor of the Home Furniture Co. at 1101 7th st. nw., told police that thieves entered the store early yesterday and took $62 in cash from a safe after ransacking the office. This is the fourteenth safe-cracking job to be reported to police since the beginning of September.

Entrance was gained to the store, he said, by prying loose boards from the elevator shaft on the roof.

Arlington Youth Prisoner of War In Germany

Staff Sergt. Charles F. Bang of Arlington, who was previously reported missing in action by the War Department, is a prisoner of war in Germany, his family has been informed. He is the son of Mrs. Wade D. Wiley.

The 19-year-old sergeant was a student at Washington and Lee High School when he enlisted in the Army a year ago. He has been serving in the Air Forces as a tail gunner in an Army plane.

He was a crew member of two Flying Fortresses, the Double Trouble and The Flying Circus.

Michigan, California, New York Set Pace on War Contracts

Michigan, New York and California now hold the lion's share of war contracts, a survey made available by the War Production Board revealed yesterday.

Having important implications on the nature and extent of reconversion to peace—when the "go" signal is flashed—the report revealed that as of September 30 this year more than 167 billion dollars' worth of war supply and facilities projects had been started since the beginning of the defense emergency in mid-1940.

Michigan was revealed as the over-all leader of the program, with almost 17 billion dollars of production and facilities contracts let in that State. California came second with almost 15 billion, with New York right behind California with four millions less.

Michigan maintained leadership in actual production with about 15.8 billion dollars, but California has grabbed the facilities lead with 1.8 billion dollars.

Of the total, 44 billion dollars are in aircraft and related munitions, 22 billion dollars in ships, both merchant and naval, 32 billion dollars in ordnance, 30 billion dollars in facilities and 40 billion dollars in miscellaneous munitions, mainly easy-to-make items.

The District of Columbia ranked fifth from the bottom of the list with almost 94 million dollars in war contracts, with Wyoming, South Dakota, North Dakota and Montana holding smaller amounts.

The five leaders—in order—in each category are as follows:

Production alone — Michigan, New York, California, Ohio, Pennsylvania.

Facilities — California, Texas, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio.

Aircraft—California, New York, Michigan, New Jersey, Ohio.

Ships—California, New Jersey, Washington (State), Massachusetts, Pennsylvania.

Ordnance—Michigan, New York, Pennsylvnaia, Illinois, Ohio.

Miscellaneous munitions — New York, Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Illinois.

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 29 (AP). "We'll start a bonfire that will burn that Washington squirrel cage down unless the men reutrning from war get their just deserts," Warren H. DO YOU KNOW THE NAMES OF
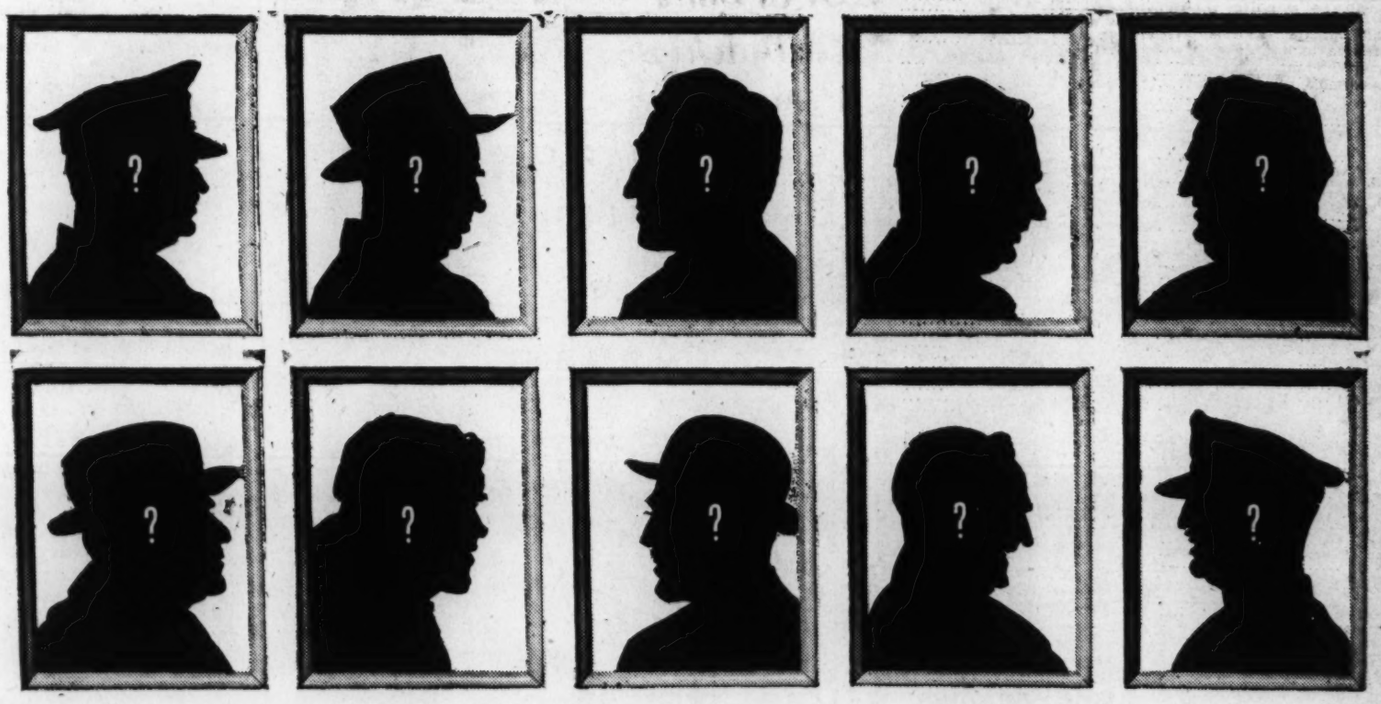
in the world's most powerful nation?



AMERICAN LEADERSHIP has never been so vital as today. On the eve of the second anniversary of Pearl Harbor, the names of a few outstanding leaders stand out in bold relief... military men, government officials and business or labor leaders who have helped bring this nation from a militarily weak state to that of the greatest military and economic power the world has ever known.

Because of the vital significance of American leadership, both today and for the future, Newsweek has put the following question to some 65 distinguished American editors, historians and news correspondents:

¶Who, in your opinion, are the ten Americans—in government, the armed forces or civil life—who have made the greatest contribution of leadership to the nation during the first two years of our formal participation in the war?

How would you answer this question? It's a question as stimulating as it is important to be able to answer.

For the core of a democracy's strength is its leadership. Leadership that is not constrained by force, but that is chosen by the free will of the people... or that comes about naturally through the sheer ability of the individual.

As a part of the free press which makes it possible for a democratic people to evaluate its leadership, Newsweek will present a comprehensive review of America's two years of war in the December 6th issue. Keynote of this section will be the names of America's ten outstanding leaders, along with the names of the men who chose them.

This Thursday, when the December 6th issue of Newsweek appears on the newsstands, a Newsweek advertisement will appear in this paper—announcing the ten leaders selected, for the benefit of those who are unable to obtain a copy of Newsweek. If you are able to get a copy, please share it with as many friends as possible.

THE SECOND ANNIVERSARY OF PEARL HARBOR

Two years of war have wrought mighty changes in the United States. These changes—and their significance—are the theme of a special section of the December 6th Newsweek. Feature of the section will be pictures and stories describing the ten men who have helped most in transforming the United States from a weakling to a military colossus. This section will also include a graphic presentation of production; the growth of our Army, Navy and Air Force; the cost of war and shipments of lend-lease; and the nation's far-flung battle-fronts. This review is particularly important for every thinking American to read. If you can't get a copy, make every effort to borrow one from a friend.

60-Hour Week Seen For FBI Division

In a move to clear up a big backlog of work, employes in the huge identification division of the Federal Bureau of Investigation are to be given the opportunity of working a 60-hour week, from 8 to 6:30 o'clock, six days a week. They're paid overtime for authorized hours put in over 40 and the division, which is located in the District Armory, is now on a 48-hour week. The longer work-week will start on December 14. Officials hope it'll cure its manpower problem. The division, which has more than 80 million fingerprints in its files, has hired scores of Tech and Anacostia High School students for part-time work. Nevertheless, it still needs a couple of hundred employes. Many FBI employes have part-time jobs themselves and it's believed that they'll quit these to work two hours additional at overtime rates in their regular jobs.

KLUTTZ

Robert Barnett is slated to resign soon as chairman of the board that passes on Federal employe decerments. He's doing a swell job but he'll return to War Manpower as personnel director. R. R. Zimmerman of the Council of Personnel Administration may move up to the chairmanship . . . Robetr B. Watts has resigned as general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board to join a New York law firm. He'll be succeeded by Alvin J. Rockwell who is on the staff of the Solicitor General and an NLRB alumnus . . . The Navy is looking for another apartment house for its WAVES. About 75 WAVES this week will be placed in the Dodge Hotel . . . The House Appropriations Committee soon will report out a bill that would appropriate 35 millions for Agriculture's farm labor program.

New York Pay Raise

Office of War Information has set up an interdepartmental committee to pass on the release of hitherto confidential Government statistics. . . . New York City is planning a pay raise for its employes. The city has been a fertile recruiting area for Federal agencies. . . . Palais Royal will set up a miniature department store at Pentagon. . . . Roy Hendrickson, War Foods official, tells the inside story of our food problems in his new book. . . . Adjutant General's Office employes will hold a war stamp dance for its employes on December 6 at the Shoreham. . . . A cafeteria will be installed in Main Treasury Building. RFC has closed its cafeteria to outside employes, and now Veterans' Administration employes must either bring their own lunch or go without, as it's almost impossible to get lunch in their allotted 30 minutes.

The Council of Personal Administration has tentatively agreed on a plan to speed up the Ramspeck-Mead Automatic Promotion Act. The compromise provides that employes paid $3200 and below be given an in-grade promotion every 12 months—they now must wait 18 months—and employes paid more than $3200 and who now must wait 30 months would be given in-grade raises every 18 months. The council plan was referred back to a subcommittee and it will draft the recommendation for presentation to Congress.

The Civil Service Commission's investigative practices are under fire again. For the commission it's simply a case of damned if you do and damned if you don't. As revealed exclusively here on November 2, the commission made an inquiry into its investigative staff after it had received charges from the United Federal Workers of America, the CIO union of white-collar Federal workers, that investigators were asking questions regarding unions, race, color, etc. The commission told the union that its orders had been violated in two instances and it followed this up by repeating its policies which are designed to protect the civil liberties of American citizens.

Questions Barred

Investigators were told they can't ask questions relating directly or indirectly to the color, union membership, race, creed, or religion of an applicant. Questions about membership in the Washington Bookshop, the War in Spain, the Lawyers Guild, Socialist Party, League of Women Shoppers, American Civil Liberties Union, and the Harry Bridges Defense Committee among others, also are barred. At one time investigators asked applicants whether they read left-wing publications, but this was banned sometime ago by the commission, and it told the staff not to ask questions regarding the Daily Worker and it reminded the staff that citizens are free to read anything they like. "Remember," the commission said, "that the mere fact that a person reads a certain publication is no indication that he believes in the principles advocated by such publication."

The commission told its detectives not to ask snooping personal questions or political philosophy queries, such as whether the applicant believes in capitalism. The commission cited the record which it believes backs up its policy of protecting civil liberties. In three years it has investigated 166,915 and 27,842 were rated ineligible; 774 solely on loyalty grounds of whom 461 were found to be Communists or strong sympathizers and 313 were rated as pro-Axis.

Eighteen months of investigation that extended as far as New York was climaxed yesterday with Federal narcotics agents' arrest of Robbert Frazier, 35-year-old Negro, of 492 Central ave. se., in a place at 471 M st. nw., and the seizure of 3000 grains of heroin, LeRoy W. Morrison, agent in charge of the Washington field office of the Bureau of Narcotics, said.

Frazier, who, Morrison said, was one of the biggest local sources of illegal dope, was put under $3000 bond pending grand jury investigation of a charge of violating the Harrison Narcotics Act. He pleaded not guilty upon arraignment before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

Also araigned on the same charge and held under $2500 bond was Eugene Hill, 27, Negro, of 1507 15th st. nw. He also pleaded not guilty. Hill, according to Morrison, was arrested at 5th and M sts. nw., near Frazier's home, with 500 grains of heroin on his person.

Morrison described Hill as one of Frazier's lieutenants. He said Frazier was also behind several other dope peddlers during the 18-month probe.

Jury Indicts Dr. E.C. Wilson In Abortion

Dr. Edward C. Wilson, 63-year-old physician of 2723 Connecticut ave. nw., was indicted yesterday on a charge of performing an abortion on November 30, 1942, on a 34-year-old married woman, who, the indictment charges, died 10 months later.

Dr. Wilson has been indicted previously on a similar charge, but his arraignment on the first charge has been postponed due to his illness.

The indictment yesterday was one of 27 returned by the grand jury in District Court before Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher.

Officers of the Twelfth Precinct on their beats and in scout cars continued to keep their eyes open yesterday for the Negro who exchanged shots with Pvt. James G. Beach late Sunday night after he was cought in a Safeway Store at Riggs rd. and North Capitol sts.

Beach reported to the Police and Fire Clinic for examination and was treated for leg, head and face injuries but will continue on duty.

Can't Recall, Henry Tells Murder Jury

Jeffries Henry, 36-year-old former policeman, "just can't remember" events that led to the fatal shooting of his 26-year-old wife, Lola, in a restaurant at 1109 13th st. nw. last April 27, he told a jury yesterday in District Court, where he is on trial for first-degree murder.

The defendant remained on the witness stand all day, and throughout rigid questioning contended that he could remember only brief flashes of events on the day when police say he shot his wife, then turned the gun on himself.

Psychiatrist to Appear

Dr. John E. Lind, St. Elizabeth's Hospital psychiatrist, is expected to testify today on Henry's mental condition after the shooting.

Henry told the jury that "about the first thing" he remembered after the shooting was "coming to" in Gallinger Hospital.

The defendant said he had no recollection of his marriage April 7 to Angie Pileggi, 25-year-old Alexandria girl, nor his marriage 10 days later to a 20-year-old North Carolina waitress.

He Doesn't Remember

Henry admitted he remembered sitting in a booth of a restaurant with his wife some time in April, "but I don't remember how I got there," he added.

Asked if he shot his wife because he believed she was associating with other men, he replied: "She has always been faithful. There was absolutely no reason why I should kill my wife. We were very much in love, and she helped me as much as she could."

D. C. Calls 1st Batch of Prewar Dads

Many pre-Pearl Harbor fathers living in the District are expected to be inducted into military service some time next week. Notices to report have gone out and registrants probably will report Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. How many notices went out was not known at Selective Service headquarters last night, as all of the 25 local boards had not reported.

Already Montgomery County has sent two contingents of pre-Pearl One group from Silver Spring an another from Bethesda-Chevy Chase.

Inducted from Silver Spring were: Michael A. Mess, 2735 S. Veitch st., Arlington, Va., who was registered in Maryland and who volunteered; Franklin W. Queen, 26, Route 1 Silver Spring, Army; Charles C. Malone, 33, 1530 East-West highway, Silver Spring, Marines; Niles F. Gary, 37, 622 Carroll ave., Takoma Park, Army; Thomas J. Delaney, 37, 8008 Takoma ave., Navy; Lawrence B. Mason, 34, 119 Sherman ave., Takoma Park, Army, and Alfred Clark, 30 of Carroll and Lincoln aves., Takoma Park, Army. Malone formerly played end on the Redskins football team.

The following pre-Pearl Harbor fathers reported for duty yesterday from Bethesda-Chevy Chase: Charles R. Moran, Charles M. Schwab, Charles S. Bernard, William H. Shuff, Thomas F. Wyatt and Lawrence S. Holifield, to Fort Meade. Two went to the Navy. They are: Bernard L. Fugitt and Charles E. Jackson. Those who will go into the Marine Corps are Michael D. Brooks and Edward R. Barber.

Fairfax Couuty selective service board announced yesterday it had called 20 pre-Pearl Harbor fathers for induction in December. These are the first registrants in this classification to be called by the local board. Twelve of the group are white, eight are Negroes.

Chiefly by cancelling occupational deferments for single men and married registrants without children the Fairfax Board announced yesterday it had been able to hold-up induction of men with children much longer than had been anticipated. It also made known that the January call will be composed principally of fathers.

A sidelight on the men who have been recently inducted was furnished yesterday by the District Parole Board in announcing that out of the 400 who were under the board's supervision when they entered the service only one is known to have received military punishment. R. E. L. Smith, executive secretary of the board, said one of the men parolees who went into the armed forces had been offered a commission, but refused because he did not want his record disclosed.

D. C. Liquor License Case Heard

Punctuated frequently by exceptions from the defense, particularly as regards "hearsay evidence," and complicated by a lack of witnesses, the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday heard the case of Bernard Bobb, liquor dealer at 123 G st. nw., cited to show cause why his license should not be revoked.

It was the first of several citations to be made in connection with practices believed to be contributing to the local liquor shortage. The case was continued until next Tuesday.

Bobb was cited for selling alcoholic beverages from a place other than his licensed premises; trafficking in alcoholic beverages with another licensed dealer; purchasing for resale from a licensee whose license did not permit such a transaction; permitting his licensed premises to be used for an unlawful purpose; failing to give the purchaser of more than 12 quarts of whiskey a bill or memorandum; failing to place retail license numbers on the stamps affixed to the containers of alcoholic beverages sold by him; and delivering whisky to Paul Carter, a person under the age of 21.

The citation was made after apprehension of persons loading liquor into a truck with West Virginia tags for transportation to West Virginia, according to testimony given by Police Sergt. J. L. Mason, chief witness for Prosecutor John O'Dea of the corporation counsel's office.

His testimony was interrupted by objections from Charles E. Ford and Harry Whalen of the defense, on the claims that answers received from persons on the truck were "hearsay" and not valid as sworn testimony, but the board allowed Mason to continue.

Later on, however, the board sustained an objection to testimony about the age of one man on the truck.

Bobb did not testify. His brother, Benjamin, said he lent his brother 11 cases of "a very bad brand" of liquor with which to satisfy a "Mr. Tripplett" who wanted liquor for a veteran club. He said his brother was not able to fill the complete order, and that he wanted to help him out since the order was for a party, proceeds of which would help buy an ambulance. Mrs. Bobb testified she knew nothing about the transaction.

Others testifying were Pvt. L. G. Scripture, Pvt. E. V. Will, Pvt. Detective F. A. Jordan and Precinct Detective B. F. Bean.

2 Nurseries, Child Care Center, Opened Here

AT PLAY WHILE MOTHERS WORK—These five youngsters are listening solemnly on the opening day of Langdon School Nursery as their head-teacher, Miss Camilla Johnson, reads the story of a little boy's adventure lost in the woods. Children (left to right) are Sue Ramsburg, 4 years; Mary Lou Nettles, 4; Bobby Nettles, 3; Joellyn O'Brien, 2, and Bruce Kipnis, 2

Two nursery schools and one child-care center were opened yesterday in Washington for children of working mothers.

Five children attended the opening day of the Langdon School Nursery, 20th and Franklin sts. ne., and the same number appeared at the Langston Terrace Nursery for Negroes, 24th st. and Bennings rd. ne. Both nurseries have a capacity of 30 children and a full enrollment is expected on completion of medical examinations, officials said.

Three children attended the opening day of the Thomson School center, 12th and L sts. nw. With these three additions, there are now 11 nurseries and child-care centers operating in Washington under the supervision of the Board of Education, with funds made available by the Federal Works Agency under the Lanham Act.

The five children at Langdon School showed no trace of timidity as they played through the day from early morning until their working mothers collected them last night. Sprightliest of them all was 2-year-old Joellyn O'Brien, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. O'Brien.

The boys and girls ate heartily at noon and throughout the day they pulled wagons in the playroom, listened to stories read by Camilia Johnson, head teacher, and went to their respective cots in the late afternoon.

Nursery applications must be submitted at the office of Services to Children of Working Mothers, 472 Indiana ave. nw. Approximately 150 requests for child care assistance are received each week.

Appeal Fails

Court Holds Employer Must Settle

Persons employed in the District are entitled to compensation under the District of Columbia Compensation Act if they are injured or killed outside the District while on business for their employer, the United States Court of Appeals held yesterday in affirming a District Court decision.

The case grew out of the death of Preston Crowell, jr., salesman for the B. F. Goodrich Co., fatally injured in January, 1941, while on a business trip in Pennsylvania. Theodore Britton, deputy commissioner for the District of Columbia, United States Employes Compensation Commission, ordered the widow compensated under the District act. The compensation will amount to from $10 to $15 a week. Crowell had an office and did a portion of his business in the District.

Pointing out that the B. F. Goodrich offices are in Akron, Ohio, and that Crowell had spent more time on business outside the District than in it, the Goodrich firm, the General Accident Fire & Life Assurance Corp., Ltd., of Scotland, contended that the District act should not apply.

Name Change Asked

Anthony Boguszewski, Government employe, of 2228 1st st. nw., filed a petition in District Court yesterday to have his last name changed to Bogart. Boguszewski is difficult to spell and pronounce and is a "source of great inconvenience, embarrassment and annoyance," the petitioner points out.

Transit Co. Report Shows D. C. Growth

The phenomenal growth of the Washington metropolitan area in the last few years was reflected yesterday in the tenth anniversary report of the Capital Transit Co. which was founded on December 1, 1933.

Showing an increase of 4½ times in the company's patronage, the review of Capital Transit's activities also revealed that its labor force was boosted by 94 per cent, passenger revenue by 290 per cent, and the payroll by 363 per cent.

While the company's 917 vehicles carried 122 million passengers in 1933, there are 2144 Capital Transit streetcars and buses today, carrying an estimated 539 million passengers. The number of employes has increased from 2601 in 1933 to 5055 now, receiving $12,720,000 in salaries and wages today, compared with $2,750,000 10 years ago. Passenger revenue, in the same period, increased from 7,148,000 to $27,900,000.

Indicating the decisive trend from streetcar to bus transportation, the report disclosed that only 192 streetcars were added to the company equipment, bringing it to the present total of 895, while the number of buses grew from 214 to 1249. While slightly more than three times as many passengers were carried by streetcar this year than in 1933, buses hauled 204 million persons in 1943, compared with 15 million 10 years ago.

The company reported that 700 of its employes are serving in the armed forces, and that their workers have invested more than one million dollars in war bonds.

Shot Over Line

Dog Victim Of Boundary Mixup

A mistake in identifying the District-Maryland boundary line was the reason for a Prince Georges County officer recently discharging a firearm at a dog in the District, according to a report on the incident made public by Maj. Edward J. Kelly yesterday. He made no comment on the case other than to say that it will go through the usual channels to the Corporation Counsel.

The incident was reported last week to Major Kelly by Lieut. James E. Silvea, acting captain of the Eleventh Precinct, who said he thought no action should be taken.

"To present this case to the court at this time could serve no useful purpose, but could perhaps be the source of a good deal of animosity between the two police departments," he said.

Officer Burgess, when questioned about the incident, said that the dog was running loose in Maryland the first time he shot at it. He said he only wounded it and when it ran across the District line, he had to shoot again to put it out of its misery.

Investigation at the scene of the shooting disclosed that the dog was really in the District and was shot on Eastern ave. ne., about 20 feet from two stones which mark gess said, when this was pointed the boundary line. Officer Burout to him, that he thought the street was the boundary line.

Fast Action Promised On Baby Broker Bill

By Anne Hagner

Chairman McCarran of the Senate District Committee, who returned to Capitol Hill yesterday after a month's absence, summarized the status of all pending District legislation and revealed that he will appoint a subcommittee immediately for consideration of the "baby broker" bill.

This measure, which would provide for licensing all child-placing persons and agencies, already has been passed by the House and was deferred just before the summer recess in anticipation of hearings.

Reports of increased numbers of cases in which babies have been bought and sold in the District have caused social agencies to request quick action on the measure.

The Nevada Senator, who has been holding public lands hearings in the West, also announced that he will not introduce a revised bill as a substitute for legislation he proposed many weeks ago to grant Washingtonians the right to vote for a seven-man Board of Commissioners.

Rejects Idea of Substitute

He turned down the idea of a substitute, suggested in several quarters, because "I stated at the time the bill was introduced that I am not wedded to its provisions."

"I stand ready to adopt any suggested amendments which will improve the bill without opening the way to unnecessary controversy," McCarran added. "For me to introduce a revised bill at this time, before hearings have been held, might well be taken as an indication that I have decided to give my approval only to such amendments as might be included in the revised bill.

"Furthermore, if I were to introduce a revised bill there might be some thought that I was arrogating to myself powers which properly should be exercised by the subcommittee. I prefer to let the subcommittee rewrite the bill, if it is to be rewritten."

Hearings Scheduled

Hearings on the McCarran measure and on two others introduced by Senator Holman (Republican) of Oregon already have been scheduled for December 7 and 8. The first Holman bill set up the machinery whereby District citizens would choose their own form of administration and the second, offered as a substitute, established a three-man charter commission to select a means of home rule to sub-

You'll Never Eat Matilda

This is Matilda. She's been in the world since Saturday and from her bearing she appears to be all that Dr. William M. Mann, director of the Washington Zoo, claims for her which is that she possesses a pure-blooded lineage which dates back to the era before the Roman conquest of Britain. Matilda was named suddenly yesterday when inquiries were made about her: "A name for her?" Dr. Mann asked, "I just can't be bothered with a contest at this time—from now on she's Matilda." Officially she's of the English Park breed.

House to Vote On D. C.-Va. Boundary Bill

The long discussed District-Virginia boundary bill and two other "noncontroversial" measures will be voted upon today in the House, it was announced yesterday by Chairman Radolph of the House District Committee.

The other two bills reported favorably by Randolph's committee would waive payments by servicemen for renewal of drivers' licenses, and would permit the installation of steam-heating pipes beneath the streets in the immediate vicinity of the Mayflower Hotel.

The boundary bill, introduced in its present form by Randolph, would establish the line beginning at a point where the northwest boundary of the District intercepts the high water mark on the Virginia shore of the Potomac, following the present mean high water mark southeast along the shore to Little River to Boundary Channel, thence to the main body of the Potomac and along the Virginia side across the mouths of all tributaries affected by tides to Second st. in Alexandria to the present pierhead line.

The territory on the Virginia side of the Potomac lying between the boundary cited in the bill and the mean high water mark as it existed January 24, 1791, would be ceded to Virginia, but concurrent jurisdiction would be reserved by the Government.

Purpose of the bill, urged by the Department of Justice, is to make a final decision as to court jurisdiction over persons committing crimes in the disputed area.

McNabb Case Review Asked Of High Court

The Department of Justice yesterday petitioned the Supreme Court to review the James P. Mitchell case, in which a District Court conviction on housebreaking and larceny charges was reversed by the United States court of Appeals on the basis of the McNabb decision.

The decision was handed down by the Supreme Court last March, and the Justice Department hopes to have two points clarified by getting the high court to consider the Mitchell case in the light of the March decision.

These are the points which Solicitor General Charles Fahy said the Justice Department hopes to have cleared up:

1. In the McNabb case it was held that confessions or evidence obtained against a prisoner being detained without arraignment in "reasonable" time were not admissable against the defendant in court. Does this mean that unsolicited evidence or confessions obtained while detention without arraignment is proper also are to be precluded?

2. Does the ruling prevent the use as evidence of property secured without a search warrant but with the defendant's consent prior to arraignment?

BARNABY By Crockett Johnson

The O'Malley Committee seeks merely to learn the truth about Santa Claus, m'boy. Is he a myth masquerading as a man? . . . Or vice versa? . . . Either way, he won't look good in headlines.
Then my unbiased committee will find out whether this Claus is a rogue taking fraudulent credit for the Christmas benevolence you children enjoy, or whether he IS to blame for this practice which spoils and softens up our youth.
In my first preliminary reports to the press, I'll—
Gosh, Mr. O'Malley. When you finish investigating him, Santa Claus won't—
Barnaby! We mustn't prejudge things. This investigation is to be conducted in a fair and impartial manner.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman Is Depressed by Her Inability to Cope With Employed Sister's Aggressive Insistence On Leaving Her Unruly Small Sons in Her Care

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I hope you can help me solve an extremely unfortunate problem. My sister, who is employed, and who has two young sons, has always called upon me to take charge of them when she wanted to go out. And while I have never acted overjoyed at the prospect,—because they are definitely "problem" children,—nevertheless I have never refused.

Recently, the nursery school where her boys are enrolled asked her to make other arrangements for them on Thanksgiving Day. As usual, she turned to me. This would save her taking a day's leave from her job. Having worked at the same place, I know she can have a day's leave, if she so desires; but I also know that she (to use her own words), "absolutely abhors anything having to do with taking care of a home and children." That is why she works in the first place.

My present circumstances are these: I have one baby and am expecting another in a couple of months. My baby is sick in bed with an infected ear and throat; and I haven't felt well since the first month of pregnancy. I was planning to have my parents with us for Thanksgiving dinner—preparing the dinner myself, of course. My sister knew all this when she asked me to take charge of her boys for the day. When I didn't act overly anxious, she said sharply that if she couldn't make other arrangements, I would just have to take them. Later I telephoned her that I would be glad to watch over one boy; but that it would be impossible for me to look after both on that day.

Wishes to Prevent Rift That Threatens

I EXPLAINED that it was taking almost all my time to keep the sick baby entertained and do the regular household chores; and that I just couldn't look after two more children and prepare Thanksgiving dinner, in addition. At that, she exploded! She said taking care of one boy would be no help at all. She said it occurred to her (1) that I wouldn't think of NOT preparing "a silly dinner;" (2) that I wouldn't think of notifying dad (who was then out of town) that I was cancelling the invitation; (3) that I wouldn't think of inviting her and the children to share the meal, etc., etc. Then she slammed up the receiver.

Miss Haworth, I know this won't be the end of it, since no one else (she says) will agree to take care of the children. She will be calling upon me again soon, in spite of this argument, and I don't think I can stand any more "rounds" with her boys. I don't know what to do. We have always been very close and used to get along together famously. Although I could see this coming, I have tried my best to keep peace with her. Any help you can give will be more than appreciated. I am worried sick over the situation and I simply don't know what to do. R. F. L.

Her Real Affliction Is Senseless Worry

DEAR R. F. L.: You have a problem, yes,—but not the problem you think. Your problem is how to overcome your addiction to senseless worry,—which either stems from, or has attained the proportions of, an anxiety neurosis. Worry is an emotional vice with you; and your "sick" reaction to this preposterous Thanksgiving imbroglio with your sister suggests that it is high time you threw off the habit, which is bidding fair to reduce you to a chronic condition of hopeless neurasthenia.

OBJECTIVELY appraised, your sister's embittered attack on you was wholly unprovoked, and while it puts her in a bad light, it shouldn't feaze you in the least. She flew into a tantrum and took it out on you when she found house-work and child-tending staring her in the face for the holiday. She hadn't a leg to stand on, in the circumstances, in trying to palm off her responsibilities on you. And while it may have been barely permissible (from the viewpoint of propriety) for her to inquire if you could do her the favor of keeping them for the day, it was the height of unpardonable presumption for her to try to carry her point by acid-tongued insistence.

Recent Quarrel Cleared the Air

ON YOUR SIDE, you had reasons more-than-sufficient to justify you in declining to oblige her nervy proposal. And the fact that your child was sick in bed, with an ear and throat infection, should have prompted her to quickly withdraw her suggestion;—purely as a health safeguard for her sons. Now that the quarrel has transpired, it is your sister, not you, who should be cogitating: "What to do?" And her decision should be: I owe my sister an apology for my despicable loss of self-control. And I might as well face the fact that it is up to me to look after the boys when they're not in school; and stop trying to palm off the chore on somebody else; and also, stop feeling sorry for myself because I have that job to do.

INSTEAD of worrying yourself sick about what happened, you should be congratulating yourself that the long veiled, unpleasant issue has been blasted into the open, by emotional intemperance on her part, not yours. Now that she has aggressively locked horns with you on the question of who should be penalized, you or her, by minor emergencies in her household, she must automatically be the loser of the referee's decision. And as a matter of sound present judgment and diplomatic foresight, you should consider the question closed, with the issue settled in your favor, once and for all. The problem would be decidedly more "delicate," if she ingratiatingly wooed your sentimental consideration of herself and her sons; and though foiled on occasion, rallied ever undaunted to try, with honeyed ruse, to make capital of your affection on another day.

Mutual Consideration Is Essential to Peace

HONORABLE peace between individuals is kept on a basis of mutual consideration. Otherwise, there is no true peace. So long as your sister is unwilling to subscribe to that condition, the constructive thing for you to do is to hold her, and her problems, firmly at arm's length. By forcing her to meet them herself, and at the same time work out an adult-type adaptation to your wholesome, hard boiled detachment, you will have done her a lasting, twofold favor. You will have obliged her, at long last, to get ahead with her personal growth. M. H.

Helen Orr Watson to Review Books

The Chevy Chase branch of the League of American Pen Women will meet with Miss Elizabeth A. Smart in the Methodist Building Saturday at 2:30 p. m.

Mrs. Helen Orr Watson, author of "Chance," about a U. S. Army homing pigeon; "Top Kick," and "Trooper," a dog for war, will give a review of her books.

Mrs. Watson, wife of Col. James T. Watson of the Signal Corps, was overseas in the uniform of the YWCA herself in the last World War. She had charge of the war bride work in the YW hostess house, located in the Mosley Hill Hospital in Liverpool, and saw there what was the beginning of "Dogs for War," war-trained dogs loaned the American Army by France and Great Britain.

POST DISCOVERIES—

For That Willowy Look

At first glance this is the kind of dress that you own only if you have the unlikely combination of a willowy figure and money in the bank. But Eureka! It doesn't take a bank roll, and it will make your figure look willowy whether it is or not.

This is a good nomination for your "one and only" dressy dress. Why? Because it's so simple that you can wear it time after time with the assurance that comes with being becomingly garbed.

The scarf neckline is new and very flattering. Such scarfs, which are a wonderful balance to the slimness of the silhouette, were shown recently in a number of high priced spring collections which we reviewed in New York. We're for scarves because they are so versatile—they can be draped, or wraped, or knotted, or worn in a flattering bow arrangement—any such fashion device deserves attention because it allows you to have as many variations as your imagination can conceive. This of course makes one dress look like an endless wardrobe.

The sleeves are new. They're short and loose, which is the sleeve recipe for many of next spring's dresses (This means you'll be able to wear this little number for a long time to come without feeling dated!)

The skirt is a wraparound that falls into a flowing drape down one side. Here again real designing ability shows itself, because the drape compensates for the straight silhouette of the skirt and the illusion is one of vertical lines. This you know makes for slenderness.

Call us—NAtional 4200 Extension 324—and we'll tell you where this "fool the eye" little gem can be found.

Your Baby And Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

We cannot possibly all be alike. Some person must be unselfish because another is selfish, some submissive because another is bossy, some cruel, some kind, some talkative, some quiet and some creative and imaginative.

We cannot select the exact attributes which we would have our child possess. He or she is what he is because of both heredity and environment. The way he acts is a reflection of the behavior which gives him the most satisfaction. Whatever our children's own traits we must do with the material at hand, not send them back for exchange or refund.

Mrs. M. J. H. poses a problem of her neighborhood. Because it concerns her boy it seems monumental. "My little 4-year-old is so sweet and gentle he lets other children run over him. His father insist that when a child hits him if he does not hit back he should be spanked hard.

"I think this seems unfair. We have tried 'toughening' him up, but after a couple of blows his feelings are hurt and he comes home sobbing. Most of his playmates are girls so that seems to make his conduct worse.

"My husband was never one to romp and play with him, but he resents it when I say I think that would have helped. The boy is generous with his toys, considerate of others and spanking does not seem to be the answer."

Nor to me. I wouldn't commiserate with him when he comes home crying, but tell him repeatedly that if he would show some fight the children would leave him alone. Send him back to play without making any fuss over his hurt feelings.

His father should wrestle with him, scuffle, box and play rough so that he gets not only the masculine viewpoint but a greater ability to take physical punishment without so much resentment. He should know that children's blows do not mean they dislike him, but only that they would like their own way.

One father kept chasing his son back to stand up against pestering children until he discovered for himself that when he acted tough their own belligerency evaporated. Daddies have to shoulder some responsibility for training instead of leaving it all to the mother and then deploring the results.

Our leaflet, "Children's Quarrels," may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of The Washington Post.

World YWCA Leader Hails Women in War

By Genevieve Reynolds

Throughout the world, women are proving their equality of ability in war work. In the post-war work they must prove their equality of responsibility in world affairs. So declared Miss [illegible] F. Woodsmall, general secretary of the world's YWCA, guest speaker at the Woman's National Democratic Club luncheon meeting yesterday.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

"With the arrival of the first group of 200 WACS in North Africa, whom I met," she said, "it was proved conclusively that women can be trusted abroad."

Outlining the work of the world's YWCA, she pointed out that it had been curtailed by the war, but still had an unfolding opportunity for spreading the Christian world. She said that it had the task of reknitting its life and the life of those in war-torn countries who had been broken by war.

Miss Woodsmall referred specifically to the contribution of the world's YWCA to the servicewomen of Great Britain. And despite the fact that the majority of clubs are in basement air raid shelters, they never had reached a higher level of service. She emphasized that in occupied countries these clubs served as "an oasis of trust in a cesspool of hatred."

Miss Woodsmall told how the world's YWCA had ministered to refugees across the world, beginning with the trek in China in 1937. "In service to refugees, you must avoid the danger of pauperizing them," she averred. "The acme of service is for the refugees to do something for other refugees whenever possible."

Programs of the world's YWCA now are a far cry or wide contrast to those of a few years hence. About 1885, a small group met in a quiet London drawing room and planned services for the nurses in the Crimean War. It was a meditative group which emphasized prayer. Now throughout the world, wherever you see the blue triangle sign of the organization, you find night clubs in full swing to meet the needs of the people. It offers a round-the-clock program for servicewomen, warworkers and others who need recreation and spiritual uplift, according to Miss Woodsmall.

In an interview the speaker had with Queen Elizabeth of England, the Queen said "The ideal of this period is to maintain levels of life as near normal as possible and to keep the levels of the home and family life."

Jumping from Paris, to Belgium, Chungking, Tokyo, Casablanca, London, Manila in her description of the world's YWCA the speaker said that in those countries and cities where the youths have organized youth movements to provide wholesale recreation and spiritual guidance, juvenile delinquency is negligible.

Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, president of the club, presided and introduced the speaker.

Too Much Money Our Problem Not Food Rationing, Scarcity

By Ida Jean Kain

Impossible as this sounds, we actually have too much money to contend with, rather than a scarcity of food. There are three times as many dollars in the great American pocketbook than formerly. The main reason we have rationing is that we're more prosperous and we're sharing the food.

As soon as people begin making more money, they find they like the same kind of food as the people who had been making more money had been buying. When the head of the house comes home with a raise in pay, it is not human nature to say, "Good, now we can buy more beans!"

One man, away down in the low income bracket, to his dazzled surprise, had his pay upped five times at the start of the war. Someone asked what he was buying with his extra money, bonds? "No," he said, "we're going to get around to that. But right now, we're mostly buying beefsteak. We find we like it." And who doesn't!

Back in 1941, when the defense plants opened up full blast, we bought 10 per cent more meat, fish and poultry; 15 per cent more citrus fruits and tomatoes; considerably more milk and butter and other fats, and moderately more eggs, vegetables, and fruits other than citrus. More people had more money and they ate better.

Adding these foods to the menus made an appreciable improvement in our nutritional status. During the depression, as a whole, the people couldn't afford to eat well and there were huge "food surpluses." You may not like rationing, but it comes a great deal closer to giving everyone an equal chance at good nutrition.

Rationing hits the choice foods but we will keep on having a variety of food. Be fair. Don't try to get more than your share, or someone else will get too little. Use your stamps for all rationed foods and be on guard against what uncle Sam brands as the gray market. You are dealing in it when you have meat out in a restaurant and save up on stamps to skip the meatless days. And you are in the black market when you go higher than the ceiling prices.

Listen to Ida Jean Kain tonight 8:05 to 8:15 on WINX.

AAUW Unit Hears 'World Citizen'

The Washington Branch of the American Association of University Women held a tea yesterday with Miss Ruth F. Woodsmall, general secretary of the World's YWCA, as speaker. Hostess for the tea was Miss Grace E. Frysinger.

Miss Woodsmall has traveled widely in the Near East, India, Netherlands, East Indies and Far East as well as in North and South America and Europe. After an extended trip in South America early in the present year she spent four months visiting Great Britain, Sweden, and North Africa, returning by air transport from Algiers to Miami.

While in London Miss Woodsmall had an audience with the Queen, arranged by Lady Helen Graham, Lady in Waiting to the Queen, who is president of the YWCA of Great Britain.

Miss Woodsmall discussed "Impressions of a Wartime Visit to Great Britain and Sweden."

The program committee will present Mrs. Ruth Cranston, lecturer, who will speak on "Concrete Results of the International Effort of the Past 25 Years" today at 8 p. m.

Mrs. Cranston became a world citizen at the age of 8 when she started off on a two years' world tour with her family. She has lived in 18 different countries, including two years in China and two in India. In Geneva she was closely associated with many important international leaders.

Subsequently she organized a committee of 18 foremost European and American experts for "the study of world problems on a world basis."

Tomorrow Mrs. Robert Neuman, associate divisional assistant of the State Department, will be the guest speaker of the International Relations Committee meeting at 12 noon. Mrs. Neuman was born in India, and was educated in India, Europe and America. She will discuss "Village-India—its Customs and Ways of Life." Mrs. James W. Irwin, chairman, will preside at the meeting.

March to Altar Continues Here As Dozens of Local Couples Wed

The march to the altar continued unabated the past few days as dozens of Washington girls became brides.

In a typical wartime ceremony on Sunday, Miss Phyllis Elizabeth Rands became the bride of Pfc. Douglas R. Peck of Scranton, Pa. Their marriage took place in the Presbyterian Church at State College, Pa., and was a simply arranged affair, attended only by members of the two families.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Delafield Rands of this city, and Mr. Peck is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Peck of Scranton, Pa.

In the absence of Dr. Rands, who was unable to attend the wedding, Mrs. Rands gave her daughter in marriage. She was attired in a dark green wool suit and hat and wore a corsage of orchids. She was attended by Miss Blythe Hartley, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Carl Hartley of Washington. Performing the ceremony was the Rev. Donald W. Carruthers. Following the service a small luncheon and reception was held.

The couple will make their home at State College, where the bride is a student. Mr. Peck is a member of the Army Corps stationed there and will begin his training as an air cadet in the spring.

Howell—Sunderman

After a brief wedding trip the former Miss Carol Dorothea Sunderman will make her home with her parents here until such time as her husband, Aviation Cadet Charles Henry Howell, jr., completes his training at Maxwell Field, Ala.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Frederick Sunderman of Arlington, Va., and Cadet Howell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Howell of St. Petersburg, Fla., formerly of Arlington.

Their marriage took place November 24 in the Post Chapel at Maxwell Field, Montgomery, Ala. Officiating at the double ring ceremony was Chaplain James Z. Hanner. Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in white silk jersey designed with train and long sleeves. Her shoulder-length veil was held by a Juliet cap and she carried a bouquet of shell pink carnations and white rosebuds. Only attendant was Mrs. Paul McGinness of Baltimore, who wore aqua crepe and carried American Beauty rosebuds. Aviation Cadet George Keck served as best man.

A small reception was held at the Jefferson Davis Hotel. The bride is a graduate of Miami University at Oxford, Ohio, and is a member of Sigma Kappa Sorority. Cadet Howell attended The Citadel in Charleston, S. C.

Bralove—Blundon

Announcement has been made by Francis A. Blundon of the marriage of his daughter, Miss Eloise Blundon, to George Bralove. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Bralove of this city.

The wedding took place last week in the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church. The bride was given in marriage by her father and was attired in a frock of white lace and net. Her flowers were white orchids. Maid of honor was Miss Delores Blundon, wearing blue net and carrying rust chrysanthemums. Miss Georgena Ofarino was the bridesmaid and Janet Welch the flower girl. They, too, wore blue ensembles and carried rust-colored flowers. Lieut. Bernard Bralove was best man and Daniel Bralove served as usher. A reception followed at the home of the bride's father.

Hoyt—Clark

Making their home temporarily at Tampa, Fla., are Corpl. and Mrs. Homer Lewis Hoyt. She is the former Miss Virginia Adele Clark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Shirley Clark of Washington. Corporal Hoyt is the son of Mrs. Robert L. Beck of Bridgeport, Conn.

Their marriage took place a few days ago at the Emory Methodist Church. The Rev. Edgar C. Beery performed the ceremony assisted by the Rev. Horace E. Cromer. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was attired in royal blue velvet with feather hat to match and wore a shoulder corsage of orchids.

Maid of honor was Miss Betty Ann Feissner, costumed in dubonnet velvet with hat to match and a corsage of pink rosebuds. R. Shirley Clark served as best man and ushers included Randolph E. Clark, Cecil H. Clark, John J. Eckstine and Gale Feaster. A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents.

The couple left later for Tampa, Fla., where the bridegroom is stationed at Drew Field. Mrs. Hoyt expects to remain in Florida until the first of the year, at which time she will return to make her home with her parents here.

Mr., Mrs. Herman Gross To Make Home Here

Mrs. Bella Rosenfeld announced the wedding of her daughter Sylvia to Herman Gross of New York and Washington on Sunday, November 28, at the Adas Israel Synagogue, with Rabbi Metz and Cantor Novick officiating. Mr. Gross is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Gross of New York.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Jack Rosenfeld of Baltimore, Md. She wore a powder blue suit with fuchsia accessories, and carried a prayer book holding a spray of white orchids tipped with fuchsia.

Couple Celebrate Golden Wedding

In celebration of their fiftieth wedding anniversary, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard B. Jones, entertained yesterday afternoon with a reception at their home on Wyoming ave.

Because of the war, Mrs. Jones elected to keep the party a small one, inviting only close friends and members of the immediate families to the "after 5 o'clock" fete. Mr. and Mrs. Jones have made their home in the Capital for the past 25 years.

Chilean Fliers Arrive Here

The Chief of Staff of the Chilean Air Forces and a number of officers, who, at the invitation of the United States Government, have been touring the air bases in our country, arrived in Washington yesterday and are stopping at the Mayflower. In the party are Lieut. Gen. Manuel Tovarias, Gen. Oscar Herreros, Col. Edison Diaz, Maj. Jiver Undurraga. All are from Santiago, Chile.

Wife of Swiss Counselor Is Now an M. D.; Recently Received Diploma From Johns Hopkins University

THERE'S A NEW doctor of medicine in the Diplomatic Corps.

She's Mme. Feer, wife of the Swiss Counselor, Eduard Feer, and she received her degree at Johns Hopkins University School o Medicine a few days ago. Still in Baltimore, where she will remain until she completes her examination by the National Medical Board, she expects to return to Washington in the next few days.

When she walked up to receive that coveted sheepskin last Friday she probably breathed the biggest sigh of relief in her entire lifetime. Doing double duty as a diplomatic hostess and a medical student is a task few women would essay. Mme. Feer has managed it superbly—just by a systematized schedule in which study, household duties and diplomatic entertaining and those daily trips to and from Baltimore have been worked out on split-second timing.

Taking the course meant giving up the usual round of diplomatic teas, receptions and welfare committee meetings, of course. It meant missing numerous dinners because lessons had to be prepared, and it meant a rigid adherence to a crowded calendar for several years. Even in the summers, when the Feers spent as much time as possible at their cottage at Scientists Cliffs, Md., Mme. Feer took her medical books along and studied them between swims in the Chesapeake Bay.

IN THE BEGINNING she soft-pedaled all reports that she was working toward a medical degree . . even though that was a lifelong dream. Time and time again, when I happened to run into her, I would ask why I hadn't seen her about lately. Once I inquired if it was true that most of her spare time went into work at the public library, as I had heard . . . and, if so, would she mind telling me which particular type of literature interested her most?

"Some time," she said with a quiet smile and in a low-pitched voice that is even more enchanting because it carries a French accent, "I shall tell you." Months later I learned that she had just finished her second year in medical school and, because of the accelerated course, would receive her medical degree in November of this year.

A LITTLE OVER seven years ago when she and her husband arrived in Washington after having been on diplomatic duty in Berlin, Mme. Feer made up her mind to begin her course at the very first opportunity. When war clouds began to gather over Europe, she became even more eager to prepare herself in a field which she knew would need more and more trained workers. She signed up for premedical courses at a university here, and then continued at Johns Hopkins . . . and now she's a full-fledged physician.

MME. FEER, M. D.

She's proud of that hard-earned degree. Who wouldn't be? But she modestly refuses to take all the credit for having won it. "My husband is the one who is really responsible," she said. "I don't believe many men—not many European men or diplomats anyway—would give their wives the encouragement, the support, and the help that he did me. But for him, I never could have got it."

Counselor Feer, meanwhile, firmly refuses to take any credit for his wife's degree. "She deserves all of it herself," he says proudly.

Another diplomatic hostess entitled to carry an "M. D." after her name is Senora de Echegaray, wife of the agricultural attache, who received her degree in Zurich several years before she and her husband came to Washington. And still another widely known Washington woman who is a full-fledged physician, as you probably know, is Dr. Beatrice Berle, wife of Assistant Secretary of State Adolf Berle.

ABOUT THE TOWN: Down from Ottawa for a brief visit, Lewis Clark, the Counselor of our Embassy there, and Mrs. Clark bring reports that the Canadian capital "seems more war-conscious than Washington, even though the business of living and counting ration points is not quite so difficult. At dinner with Mrs. Lister Hill the other night, they told something of their experiences in Canada and declared they had never been settled in a more delightful place. Their current visit here, where they have been staying with Mrs. Clark's mother, Mrs. J. Harry Covington, is the first in more than a year. They'll be off to New York today and then on back to Ottawa toward the end of the week. Their 10-year-old daughter, Anne, who is in school did not accompany them to Washington.

Around town they're no longer calling General Patton, "Blood and Guts." It's now "Pistol Packin' Patton." . . . The Harry L. Hopkinses still refuse to divulge when their actual moving-from-the-White-House day will be, but truth is, almost all their possessions have already been carted over to their new Georgetown home at 3340 N st. Anyway, they started paying rent there some weeks ago . . . A new type of service pin is being put out by a famous manufacturer. It's a simple but attractive arrangement of three intertwined letters, WAM, and is designed to be worn by any woman doing her own housework. Now do you get what the WAM means? Without a Maid, of course.

It's 'Grandma Robbins' for The Holidays

It's true what they say about Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins. She really is giving up that job in the State Department as Chief of the Office of Foreign Service Furnishings. She's giving it up today, and for a perfectly adequate reason. As she puts it herself, "In time of war, you cannot get decorations, anyway, if you want them. There is no need for me. I am resigning as of December 1. Of course, I will always be at the call of the Government as a consultant if they need me."

Meanwhile, between now and the first of the year, the vivacious Mrs. Robbins is going to catch up on some of the things she has been planning to do for years and hasn't had time to accomplish. And then, of course, one of the prospect that fills her with the greatest joy at the moment, is that of spending the Christmas holidays with her grandchildren, all of whom, fortunately for her, are now in New York.

There are, for example, Edward Hutchinson Robbins, jr., aged 4, and Gordon Auchincloss obbins, aged 22. Sons of Lieut. Edward Hutchinson Robbins, who is now in Africa, they are living in New York with their mother, the former Miss Helen Auchincloss.

The other grandchildren, Alexandra Forbes, aged 7, and Stuart Forbes, aged 5, are also with their mother, the former "Sunny" Robbins, in New York. Their father, Lieut. Alexander Corcoran Forbes, United States Navy, is now somewhere in the vicinity of the Solomons.

Mrs. Robbins' other son, Warren Delano Robbins, jr., is now in Argentina, where he is attached to the United States Embassy as special assistant.

Mrs. Robbins' plans after the New Year are "in the lap of the gods," but one can be sure that there will be considerable activity involved. At the moment she hopes, if there are no Government calls on her time, to turn her efforts to Red Cross work and to other charitable efforts that may have need of her services.

Snra. de Munilla Gives First in Series of Fetes

Several Hundred Guests Attend Fete of Popular Diplomatic Hostess From Cuba

By Marie McNair

Senora de Munilla, wife of the Military Attache of the Cuban Embassy, counts her friends by the hundreds.

Yesterday she welcomed them by droves at her first reception of the season—there is to be a series—given in honor of Mrs. Tomas Cajigas.

"Ah, my American friends—I love them," says the hostess, and they, too, express the same sentiment for Petrica Munilla has made and won a place in the hearts of all who know her.

If a count had been taken yesterday there must have been almost 300 at the fete, with feminine chatter gathering momentum as the afternoon wore on and the Munillas' pleasant apartment filled to overflowing from the sun room, where the punch bowl had been placed, to the dining room, where tea and coffee was served.

Senora de Concheso, wife of the Cuban Ambassador, was there, so too were most of the ladies of the embassy staff. Senora de Rodriguez, wife of the Counselor of the Cuban Embassy, was as thrilled as a schoolgirl over the return of her husband from Cuba next Sunday or Monday; told me she had moved back into her former apartment on Ontario rd.

Mme. Ertegun A Late Arrival

Mme. Ertegun, wife of the Turkish Ambassador arrived just as many guests were departing; Senora de Castillo Najera, wife of the Mexican Ambassador, was among those lingering on and Senora de Escalante, the Venezuelan Ambassador's wife, also stayed through most of the afternoon.

Conversationally minded Mme. Wei, wife of the Chinese Ambassador, chatted first with one group, then another; said she spends much of her time in New York these days, but will receive her friends at the Embassy on December 12 and on December 9 will be hostess to the United Nations Club. Also there were Senora de Castro, wife of the Ambassador of El Salvador; Senora de Caceres, wife of the Honduran Ambassador, who expects her husband back from the Relief and Rehabilitation Conference tomorrow; Lady Dixon, wife of the Australian Minister; Senora de Escalante, wife of the Ambassador of Costa Rica.

Mrs. Claude Pepper, her dark hair cut in becoming bangs which waved prettily above her blue eyes, was telling amusing stories to her friends; Mme. Rybar was telling how busy she is with the forthcoming United War Relief Center Christmas bazaar; Senora de Sarmiento, wife of the Military Attache of the Peruvian Embassy, was glad to report that she had recovered her stolen jewels, although some of them had been badly mistreated.

Mme. Pramoj Asked to Assist

Around the tea table I saw Mrs. Walter Tuckerman in a group which included Mrs. Sprague, wife of the new Representative from North Carolina, and Mrs. Thomas Wadden, and here and there assisting the hostess were Mme. Pramoj, wife of the Minister of Thailand; Senora de Parodi, Mrs. Walter Wyatt and Mrs. William Disque.

Taking their turn at the punch bowl were Senorita Laura Recinos, Senorita Blanca Vargas, Mlle. Chintana, Miss Elizabeth Lewis, Miss Fanny Lewis and Miss Anita Cajigas.

But then—to go on: There was Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck and Mrs. Philip Bonsal, whose husbands toil at the State Department; Miss Pauletta Guffey, Mrs. Burks Summers, Miss Minerva Bernardino, Mrs. Palmer Hoyt and Mrs. Barnet Nover going on together to another party; Mrs. Vernon Lowrey and her sister, Mrs. Bartley, a visitor in town; Mme. Chautemps, wife of the former Premier of France; Senora de Duhart, wife of the First Secretary of the Mexican Embassy; Mrs. Jose Colom; Senora de Vega, wife of the Minister-Counselor of the Dominican Embassy; Mrs. Carl Droop, Mrs. Charles H. McEnerney, Mrs. Leo Brison Norris, Mrs. Stuart Fries, Mrs. Barge Hartz and Mrs. William Duncan.

Mrs. Roosevelt To Speak Before Hospital Corps

Mrs. Roosevelt will address members of the American Women's Hospital Reserve Corps tomorrow afternoon at the Sulgrave Club at 4 o'clock. Arranging the program is Maj. Dorothy Lee Ward, head of the Washington group of the AWHRC.

A member of the honarary committee for the corps' parent body, which came into being during the other world war, Mrs. Roosevelt is very much interested in the work as it is being carried on now.

On the AWHRC calendar over the weekend was the buffet supper at which Mrs. Gustav L. Stewart entertained on Sunday night when her guests included convalescent officers in the Army and Navy hospitals here. A musical program was a feature of the evening's entertainment and members of the AWHRC's ferry command assisted in receiving.

By running back the fiber of American character and statesmanship to its source, in terms of absorbing and deeply personalized drama, Sidney Kingsley, in "The Patriots," has fashioned a profoundly moving and inspiring play that binds the present tightly to the most trying period in the Republic's tortured and heroic past.

Choosing the bitterly contested years from 1790 to 1801 as the span of the action of prologue, three acts and seven scenes, the author has given integrity, human warmth and emotional excitement to the new birth of liberty and freedom that has stood for a century and a half as "the world's best hope" through the staunchness of the founding fathers who comprise the principal characters in his play.

The question resolved by the three acts being presented for a fortnight on the stage of the National Theater is whether free men are capable of self-government or only to be the vassals of monarchs and dictators, with no voice in their own destiny. It is an elucidation of the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution and the Bill of Rights, set forth dramatically and passionately in the idiom of violent conflict and a stern battle of opposing principles.

Is Tense and Stirring

No dogmatic and dreary recitation of "documentary" data, "The Patriots" is alive with the stirring elements of drama that determined whether the new experiment in human liberty should perish or survive. The blueprints of the new and untried governmental structure were not perfect. There were sins of commission and omission that cried out for correction. Dissension among the architects of the new structure—the monarchists on the one hand and the dreamers of a true democracy on the other—brought the infant nation to the verge of bankruptcy and disaster. The Nation of free men, masters of their present and their future, visioned by Washington, Jefferson, Madison and Monroe, was imperiled by the misconceptions and wavering zeal of a Hamilton immersed in delusions of Napoleonic imperialism.

All this the author has expressed in vivid and swiftly moving scenes, vigorous and telling dialogue and the translation of glorified figures in history into a group of earnest, harassed and fallible men, struggling to find the solutions of problems they themselves had created, and not above seeking the counsel of their smithies, tradesmen, frontiersmen and servants in the process. The great are taken off their pedestals and their feet planted firmly on the ground.

Finely Chosen Cast

All of which might come to naught were the principal roles not played with sympathy, understanding and force by a cast of unusual skill and balance. The Playwrights' Company and Rowland Stebbins have been particularly considerate of the requirements of Lieutenant Kingley's work by assigning an especially competent cast to its interpretation.

Walter Hampden brings power and distinction to the portrayal of Thomas Jefferson, who emerges as the pivotal figure in the action. The play opens with his return from six years as American emissary to France and his visions of a quiet and peaceful retirement at Monticello. There is tenderness, poignance and beauty in this brief prologue, to which Julie Haydon, as Patsy Jefferson, lends gentleness and elfin charm.

But there is no retirement for Jefferson. At the urgent behest of Washington he remains in the fray through the crisis, with ever-mounting burdens and a gradually expanding power, to which Mr. Hampden gives authenticity and conviction. His tilts with Hamilton and the inaugural address that closes the play are memorable moments of drama.

As Alexander Hamilton, Guy Sorel also pursues an ascending course of dramatic effectiveness as the constant menace to everything useful to the republic. The Hamilton of "The Patriots" is not the Hamilton of the history books, but it is a bit of a tour de force for the actor.

An Able Washington

Cecil Humphrey's George Washington is another that quite measures up to the requirements of an unconventional portrait of an aging soldier, fighting a fight that needs to be fought, even if against his personal inclination. Ross Matthew and John P. Boyd are efficient as Madison and Monroe, and Sonya Stokowski is a lovely Mrs. Hamilton in her one scene in which her husband's philandering is revealed to her as a political weapon that may do him great injury. Miss Haydon's gentle charm is augmented by Marie Dow, the Mrs. Jefferson of the prologue, who appears only as a vision of Jefferson's earlier happiness at his beloved Monticello.

The lesser roles are played with uniform competence and contribute occasional flashes of comedy that at no time are permitted to intrude upon the more serious purposes of the play that has been so ably staged by Shepard Traube and so effectively lighted by Moe Mack.

"The Patriots" is a MUST on any judicious playgoer's list and deserves all the honors that have been heaped upon it, as all present at last night's opening enthusiastically attested.

Chiang felt gentlemen should call on ladies. Then, too, it might have been taken as an indorsement of "let's take care of Europe first"—when her one idea was and still is to get more help for China.

Renewed Contract With Ecstasy!

New York, Nov. 29.—Last week Oscar Levant renewed his contract with Columbia Records. He requested two changes in the original contract submitted him. The first change was in one of the clauses governing the period of the contract. Columbia agreed to this. The second change was in the phraseology. "Contracts are such cold documents," he explained. "I want this one to be more personal—not just the usual legal, technical language" . . . And so, in Oscar Levant's contract, one new phrase has been added, the phrase, "And the Columbia Recording Corporation IS HAPPY to make the following agreement, to wit:" etc.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

SOME MONTHS AGO, before fighting got so tough in the Mediterranean theater, Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark was returning to his headquarters in a plane and, as he approached the field, saw a baseball game in progress below him. It is strictly against orders to play ball on a landing field, but the men were so intent on their game that the plane had to circle several times before the field was cleared.

"It's the officers of the Fifth Army against the enlisted men," he was told.

"I'm an officer of the Fifth Army," said Clark, and then without a change of tone, "Will you let me play, too?"

The officer and men grinned. The tension was broken, and the ball game was resumed—with a new recruit.

Note: In Italy, however, General Clark has no time for sports—nor for visitors. He wrote friends in Washington recently, "I am plagued by official visitors. Don't they realize that I am fighting a war, not conducting a tourist agency?" . . . Latest visitor was Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau.

Reason: Farm accounting is generally a casual business, and many farmers make only a wild guess of their income.

WHEN THE SENATE Military Affairs Committee met behind closed doors to consider the General Patton affair, Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire and Senator Ed Johnson of Colorado both urged that the committee not dodge the issue.

They ran into some mild opposition, however, from Senator Chan Gurney of South Dakota. Gurney said it was unusual for the misconduct of a general to receive such prominence in wartime and that the committee should not do anything which might reflect on the integrity of the Army. But when Chairman Bob Reynolds urged unanimous approval of the Johnson motion to call Secretary Stimson, Gurney withdrew his objection.

Patton's name also figured in a closed-door meeting of the House Military Affairs Committee, at which a bill modifying the 28-year-service requirement for the promotion of Army officers to the rank of brigadier general was considered.

"Does this affect General Patton?" inquired Representative G. (Ham) Andrews of New York, when it was brought out that Patton, who has been recomended for promotion to the permanent rank of major general, now has the permanent (peacetime) rank of a colonel.

Andrews was informed that Patton wouldn't be affected, since he has served 34 years in the Army. However, two-fisted Representative Ewing Thomason of Texas raised the point that approval of the promotion bill might still be construed by some as a House indorsement of Patton's behavior.

"I think it would be bad psychology to adopt a bill of this nature right after the Patton story has broken," Thomason declared.

However, Representative Paul Kilday of Texas, who had moved for a committee vote on the promotion bill, insisted that the legislation didn't "remotely affect" Patton because of his 34 years' service, and a majority of the committee voted their agreement.

Tea Party With a Purpose Is Planned at Md. Hospital

Annual Donation Day Fete Set for Saturday; Junior Auxiliary to Assist in Receiving

A number of Montgomery County, Md., residents are planning to drive out to the Montgomery County General Hospital in Sandy Spring next Saturday for the annual donation day tea.

For the last 22 years the event, sponsored by the women's board of the hospital, has attracted hundreds of persons who bring linens, home canned goods, tinned food, fresh fruits and vegetables and cash donations enough to help the institute for a year.

Although the fete is called a tea, Mrs. Eugene W. Scott of Manor Club Estates, serving her fourth term as president, says "We never serve tea because we have made ourselves famous for the special hot chocolate served with whipped cream." Prepared by Mrs. Louis Bussler, the chocolate is known throughout the county as "hospital chocolate." Coffee and cookies are also offered.

Last year's donation day brought more than $1000 in cash, 375 pieces of linen, more than 1700 quarts of home-canned goods, 384 glasses of jellies and preserves and nearly 1000 tins of food.

The tea will be held from 2 until 5 p. m. in the nurses' home. Guides will show guests through the hospital during the afternoon hours for visitors. Members of the junior auxiliary and hospital service unit will register guests and assist in receiving.

Assisting Mrs. Scott in receiving will be Miss Frances M. Leishear, Mrs. Mahlon Kirk 4th, Mrs. E. A. Merritt, Mrs. Ailliam John Thomas, Mrs. Francis Miller, Mrs. Milton H. Bancroft, Mrs. Roland Childs, Mrs. J. Albert Wilson and Miss Mabel E. Metz.

Also assisting in the dining room will be Mrs. Vestus Willcox, Mrs. Arthur W. Palmer, Mrs. Douglas Whitlock, Mrs. William Horne, Mrs. P. H. Royster, Mrs. Walter A. Covert, Mrs. Merhle Haines, Mrs. B. Peyton Whalen, Mrs. Henry F. Gibbs, Mrs. Walter E. Perry, Mrs. F. L. Pratt, Mrs. J. J. Hutton, sr., Mrs. Edward G. Senora de Abelli Leaves for Chile

Senora de Abelli, wife of the former Bolivian Minister to Washington, left yesterday for Florida, where she will take a plane for Santiago, Chile, where she and Senor Abelli make their home.

Senora de Abelli, the former Miss Crystal Hyland of Washington State, has been in this country several months and was a visitor to the Capital earlier in the season. The Bolivian Ambassador and Senora de Guachalla entertained at a farewell dinner party for Senora de Abelli Saturday evening.

The Vogels On Holiday In New York

With their crops all in, the stock in good hands, Martin and Peggy Vogel, jr., have left their farm down at Warrenton, Va., and are on a two months' holiday in New York. They have taken an apartment on East Fifty-seventh st. where they will be joined by Mrs. Vogel's mother, Mrs. Effingham Townsend of Washington for the Christmas season.

Speaking of their well-earned vacation Mrs. Vogel said, "It's partly for fun, partly business. And anyway, it's the slack season on the farm."

While "Pete" Vogel is taking an agricultural course to increase his knowledge on farming, Peggy Vogel is shopping and seeing some of the Broadway hits. They have with them their 2-year-old son, Townsend, on his first trip to the big city and completely thrilled with it all. "I expect him to drop in at the Stork Club any day now," his mother said with a laugh.

The young Vogels are farming with a vengeance. Along with fruits and vegetables they have a prize herd of Black Angus cattle. An excellent horseman, Mr. Vogel also has a stable of thoroughbreds. His famous blue-ribbon, Demas, is vacationing for the duration now that there are so few horse shows to take part in.

Eugenia W. Cowper, William H. Lewis Wed at Gatesville

Now on a honeymoon trip to New York are Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Lewis who will make their home near Warrenton, Va.

The former Miss Eugenia Walton Cowper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Cowper of Gatesville, N. C., and Mr. Lewis, son of Mrs. Richard Lewis and the late Mr. Lewis of Broad Run and Warrenton, Va., were married at Gatesville, N. C., at an 11:30 morning ceremony on Thanksgiving Day, with the Rev. John Bonner officiating.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and was gowned in brown trimmed with butterfly sequins. She wore dark brown accessories, a Dutch hat and veil and her flowers were orchids.

Mrs. J. L. Hofler was the matron of honor and wore a gold-trimmed frock of light tan with dark brown accessories. Her flowers were yellow roses.

Gordon Lewis of Alexandria, Va., was the best man and the ushers were J. L. Hofler and Coleman Ellicott of Windsor, N. C.

The bride attended the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina, and the bridegroom attended VPI in Blacksburg, Va. The bride is a niece of Mrs. E. A. Smith of Warrenton, Va., and a greatniece of Gen. W. P. Roberts.

Postlude

Delmar Has Voice of Great Power

By Ray C. B. Brown

Washington Music Teachers' Association meets in Phillips Memorial Gallery on Monday night. Guest artist: Rose Delmar; accompanist, Margaret Tolson. Program of songs by Bach, Rissi, Schubert, Brahms, Strauss, Massenet, Horsman, Carpenter, Bridge and Dvorak.

Rose Delmare, Bohemian contralto, made her first professional appearance in this country last evening at a recital for members and guests of the Washington Music Teachers' Association in Phillips Memorial Gallery. Sound training and artistic experience were evident in her use of a voice unusual in range and remarkable for power. One understands that she was recovering from a laryngitis, and that would account for a tentative attack on her piano and mezzo-voce tones as well as for an unsteadiness in the timbre of all but full-voice passages. In fairness one must defer ultimate criticism until a more favorable occasion.

Beginning with Bach's lovely "Mein Jesu," she showed her command of style by turning to Rossi's taxing aria, "An, rendimi," with its wide compass of tessitura. The open high tones were brilliantly resonant and the low tones rich in color. A Schubert group combined the unfamiliar "An die Leier" with "Die Liebe hat gelogen" and "Rastlose Liebe." Her Brahms selections were "Nicht mehr zu Dir zu gehen" and "Mainacht," and there were two lieder by Strauss: "Befriet" and "Heimlicke Auffoderung."

From her operatic repertoire she drew Charlotte's aria, "Des cris joyeux des enfants," from Massenet's "Werther." This was followed by Horsman's "Bird of the Wilderness," Carpenter's "When I Bring to You Colored Toys" and Frank Bridge's "Love Went A-Riding." As she was singing in English for the first time, one compliments her on her diction. A final group contained two seventeenth century pastourelles: "Lisette dormait" and "Paris est au roi," and two of Dvorak's gypsy songs, sung in Czech.

Minna Niemann gives a piano recital Monday afternoon in the Sulgrave Club. Program of compositions by Respighi, Schumann, Brahms, Chopin, Howe, Griffes, Rakhmaninov and Johann Strauss.

Minna Niemann had a friendly and responsive audience yesterday afternoon at her recital in the Sulgrave Club. A conscientious musician with a capable technical equipment, she plays with fluency and tinges her readings with poetic color. In her programs she usually strives to please varying tastes by the balance between old and new, and this one was no exception, for her first offering was six of Respighi's "Antique Dances and Airs for the Lute," which one does not recall having heard here before in the piano version.

These pieces are very interesting and effective arrangements of music from the 16th and 17th centuries. The "Balletto," for example, was composed by Giovanni Batista della Gostena, and the "Gagliarda" by Vincenzo Galilei. All the numbers have melodic charm in the Italiante manner, and particularly pleasing are the "Villanella" by an anonymous composer, and the "Siciliana." The most pretentious is a sturdy passacaglia of considerable difficulty.

In her second group, she combined Schumann's "Aurschwung," the E flat minor Intermezzo of Brahms, and two pieces by Chopin: the G sharp minor Etude and the Barcarolle. Two American composers led off the final group, Mary Howe being represented by her imaginative Prelude and Charles Griffes by "Clouds." Other items were Rakhmaninov's "Lilacs" and Edouard Schuett's paraphrase of the Johann Strauss waltz, "Rosen aus dem Sueden."

Dr. Dun Leaves For Cambridge To Study Choice

The Very Rev. Angus Dun, dean of the Episcopal Theological Seminary at Cambridge, Mass., and Episcopal Bishop-elect of Washington, left yesterday afternoon by train to return home where he will consider for two weeks or longer whether or not to accept the bishopric.

After conferring with diocesan leaders here since arrival last Friday, Dr. Dun visited the Episcopal Diocesan House, 1702 Rhode Island ave. nw., yesterday morning. He was accompanied on the visit here by his wife.

By running back the fiber of American character and statesmanship to its source, in terms of absorbing and deeply personalized drama, Sidney Kingsley, in "The Patriots," has fashioned a profoundly moving and inspiring play that binds the present tightly to the most trying period in the Republic's tortured and heroic past.

Choosing the bitterly contested years from 1790 to 1801 as the span of the action of prologue, three acts and seven scenes, the author has given integrity, human warmth and emotional excitement to the new birth of liberty and freedom that has stood for a century and a half as "the world's best hope" through the staunchness of the founding fathers who comprise the principal characters in his play.

The question resolved by the three acts being presented for a fortnight on the stage of the National Theater is whether free men are capable of self-government or only to be the vassals of monarchs and dictators, with no voice in their own destiny. It is an elucidation of the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution and the Bill of Rights, set forth dramatically and passionately in the idiom of violent conflict and a stern battle of opposing principles.

Is Tense and Stirring

No dogmatic and dreary recitation of "documentary" data, "The Patriots" is alive with the stirring elements of drama that determined whether the new experiment in human liberty should perish or survive. The blueprints of the new and untried governmental structure were not perfect. There were sins of commission and omission that cried out for correction. Dissension among the architects of the new structure—the monarchists on the one hand and the dreamers of a true democracy on the other—brought the infant nation to the verge of bankruptcy and disaster. The Nation of free men, masters of their present and their future, visioned by Washington, Jefferson, Madison and Monroe, was imperiled by the misconceptions and wavering zeal of a Hamilton immersed in delusions of Napoleonic imperialism.

All this the author has expressed in vivid and swiftly moving scenes, vigorous and telling dialogue and the translation of glorified figures in history into a group of earnest, harassed and fallible men, struggling to find the solutions of problems they themselves had created, and not above seeking the counsel of their smithies, tradesmen, frontiersmen and servants in the process. The great are taken off their pedestals and their feet planted firmly on the ground.

Finely Chosen Cast

All of which might come to naught were the principal roles not played with sympathy, understanding and force by a cast of unusual skill and balance. The Playwrights' Company and Rowland Stebbins have been particularly considerate of the requirements of Lieutenant Kingley's work by assigning an especially competent cast to its interpretation.

Walter Hampden brings power and distinction to the portrayal of Thomas Jefferson, who emerges as the pivotal figure in the action. The play opens with his return from six years as American emissary to France and his visions of a quiet and peaceful retirement at Monticello. There is tenderness, poignance and beauty in this brief prologue, to which Julie Haydon, as Patsy Jefferson, lends gentleness and elfin charm.

But there is no retirement for Jefferson. At the urgent behest of Washington he remains in the fray through the crisis, with ever-mounting burdens and a gradually expanding power, to which Mr. Hampden gives authenticity and conviction. His tilts with Hamilton and the inaugural address that closes the play are memorable moments of drama.

As Alexander Hamilton, Guy Sorel also pursues an ascending course of dramatic effectiveness as the constant menace to everything useful to the republic. The Hamilton of "The Patriots" is not the Hamilton of the history books, but it is a bit of a tour de force for the actor.

An Able Washington

Cecil Humphrey's George Washington is another that quite measures up to the requirements of an unconventional portrait of an aging soldier, fighting a fight that needs to be fought, even if against his personal inclination. Ross Matthew and John P. Boyd are efficient as Madison and Monroe, and Sonya Stokowski is a lovely Mrs. Hamilton in her one scene in which her husband's philandering is revealed to her as a political weapon that may do him great injury. Miss Haydon's gentle charm is augmented by Marie Dow, the Mrs. Jefferson of the prologue, who appears only as a vision of Jefferson's earlier happiness at his beloved Monticello.

The lesser roles are played with uniform competence and contribute occasional flashes of comedy that at no time are permitted to intrude upon the more serious purposes of the play that has been so ably staged by Shepard Traube and so effectively lighted by Moe Mack.

"The Patriots" is a MUST on any judicious playgoer's list and deserves all the honors that have been heaped upon it, as all present at last night's opening enthusiastically attested.

JULIE HAYDON
who appears in the role of Patsy Jefferson in Sidney Kingsley's "The Patriots," which last night opened a two-week engagement at the National Theater. The role of Thomas Jefferson, central figure in the play, is portrayed by the distinguished actor, Walter Hampden

Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 29.—If her former husband had his way, when Orson Welles and Rita arrive back home, they'd have to walk.

RITA HAYWORTH

Just before leaving, her car was taken by her former husband from a parking lot, but it since has been returned. . . . I thought Ruth Watrbury and Elaine Osterman were off to Mexico to write about their movies down there, when all the time its been just a vacation. . . . It's Wendell Willkie's story that when Mme. Chiang Kai-shek was in New York and Winston Churchill in Washington, he phoned to ask whether she would come over for a meeting. Her reply: "I'm not well, but I'd be delighted to see you any time you come to New York." Then Mrs. Roosevelt phoned an invitation, also the President. Mme. Chiang felt gentlemen should call on ladies. Then, too, it might have been taken as an indorsement of "let's take care of Europe first"—when her one idea was and still is to get more help for China.

'Twill Be Fun

Bob Hope always licks Ed Gardner at golf, but it will be nip and tuck when they play together in "Duffy's Tavern." . . . When Edgar Bergen subbed for Ken Murray in "Blackouts," Ed Gardner went over to see him while he was slinging on the grease paint. Edgar was delighted with its flavors, and Duffy said, "I can see the headlines now—'Vaudeville Revived—by Charlie McCarthy!'" . . . Winnie Sheehan, back from New York, is bubbling over about the reception Eddie Rickenbacker got from the picture pioneers at their annual dinner there. All the bigwigs went for Rick hook, line, and sinker. And why not? They learned plenty from his two-hour off-the-record talk. . . . Bing Crosby is back from a month's holiday for an added scene in "Going My Way" and to start "Road to Utopia" December 2.

One of the Best

After the holidays Andy Devine will be off on another tour to entertain our servicemen. In the meantime, he's whittling away at a "B" picture at Universal. Before he went touring, the USO asked him where he'd like to go. Andy said, "Where it's toughest." He did—to Greenland and Labrador, where sometimes it was 30 below. Mary Elliott, a Metro singer, went along. They picked up two enlisted men en route. Wonder when he's going back on Jack Benny's program? Everybody asks for Andy . . . Young Rosemary De Camp should never have started playing mothers. She's got herself another—that of Anne Blyth in "The Merry Monahans," which costars Donald O'Connor and Jack Oakie.

Seems Incredible

A friend of mine rented her home to three members of "Frenchman's Creek" company on location. Among them was Jean Fontaine's stand-in. When my friends asked the stand-in whether Mrs. Fontaine didn't think it was a beautiful country, she replied, "I couldn't say." "Why? Hasn't she mentioned it?" "No,' 'said the stand-in. "I've been with Miss Fontaine several years now and she hasn't yet said 'Good morning!" . . . Signe Hasso plays opposite Spencer Tracy in "Seventh Cross" and doubles as a Hollywood correspondent for a Swedish newspaper.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

SOME MONTHS AGO, before fighting got so tough in the Mediterranean theater, Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark was returning to his headquarters in a plane and, as he approached the field, saw a baseball game in progress below him. It is strictly against orders to play ball on a landing field, but the men were so intent on their game that the plane had to circle several times before the field was cleared.

The General looked sternly about the field. "Who's playing?"

"It's the officers of the Fifth Army against the enlisted men," he was told.

"I'm an officer of the Fifth Army," said Clark, and then without a change of tone, "Will you let me play, too?"

The officer and men grinned. The tension was broken, and the ball game was resumed—with a new recruit.

Note: In Italy, however, General Clark has no time for sports—nor for visitors. He wrote friends in Washington recently, "I am plagued by official visitors. Don't they realize that I am fighting a war, not conducting a tourist agency?" . . . Latest visitor was Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau.

Capital Chaff

CONNECTICUT'S SAM CARP, who headed an early Russian purchasing mission angling to acquire a United States battleship, is Foreign Minister Molotov's brother-in-law. . . . Alcohol is still bearing the greater burden as a source of synthetic rubber, as compared with petroleum. The big petroleum cracking plants are coming into production, but their product is being diverted in part to high-octane gasoline. . . . Internal revenue officials will scrutinize carefully the December 15 income tax returns of farmers—who were exempt from the September 15 return. Reason: Farm accounting is generally a casual business, and many farmers make only a wild guess of their income.

WHEN THE SENATE Military Affairs Committee met behind closed doors to consider the General Patton affair, Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire and Senator Ed Johnson of Colorado both urged that the committee not dodge the issue.

They ran into some mild opposition, however, from Senator Chan Gurney of South Dakota. Gurney said it was unusual for the misconduct of a general to receive such prominence in wartime and that the committee should not do anything which might reflect on the integrity of the Army. But when Chairman Bob Reynolds urged unanimous approval of the Johnson motion to call Secretary Stimson, Gurney withdrew his objection.

Patton's name also figured in a closed-door meeting of the House Military Affairs Committee, at which a bill modifying the 28-year-service requirement for the promotion of Army officers to the rank of brigadier general was considered.

"Does this affect General Patton?" inquired Representative G. (Ham) Andrews of New York, when it was brought out that Patton, who has been recomended for promotion to the permanent rank of major general, now has the permanent (peacetime) rank of a colonel.

Andrews was informed that Patton wouldn't be affected, since he has served 34 years in the Army. However, two-fisted Representative Ewing Thomason of Texas raised the point that approval of the promotion bill might still be construed by some as a House indorsement of Patton's behavior.

"I think it would be bad psychology to adopt a bill of this nature right after the Patton story has broken," Thomason declared.

However, Representative Paul Kilday of Texas, who had moved for a committee vote on the promotion bill, insisted that the legislation didn't "remotely affect" Patton because of his 34 years' service, and a majority of the committee voted their agreement.

Renewed Contract With Ecstasy!

New York, Nov. 29.—Last week Oscar Levant renewed his contract with Columbia Records. He requested two changes in the original contract submitted him. The first change was in one of the clauses governing the period of the contract. Columbia agreed to this. The second change was in the phraseology. "Contracts are such cold documents," he explained. "I want this one to be more personal—not just the usual legal, technical language" . . . And so, in Oscar Levant's contract, one new phrase has been added, the phrase, "And the Columbia Recording Corporation IS HAPPY to make the following agreement, to wit:" etc.

OSCAR LEVANT

Vincent Youmans, one of America's foremost composers, has hired another composer, Cuba's Ernesto Lecuona, to write the songs for a ballet production which Youmans will do . . . Richard Watts, the drama critic now with OWI, is on his way to Chungking for a reunion with his colleague, Brooks Atkinson, now a war correspondent there. Watts is bearing a gift for Atkinson—not razor blades or vitamins, or clothing, but a copy of Thoreau . . . John Jacob Astor, who once was a student at St. George's School, is trying to buy the place. Astor says he didn't like it when he was there, and now wants to do something about it.

Alice Leone-Moats, author of "Blind Date With Mars," now is in Madrid, where she has been accorded rare privileges by the government. She is the first foreigner since the Spanish war to be permitted to travel throughout the country, collecting material for a book . . . She sought an audience with the Foreign Minister, who at first was reluctant and then finally asked: "Does she speak Spanish?" . . . "She speaks Spanish as well as you do," he was told, "and besides, she's good-looking" . . . "Why didn't you tell me she's good-looking to begin with? Why do you waste time?" barked the Foreign Minister. "Of course I'll see her."

When Capt. Clark Gable stopped here en route to Hollywood to finish his Army bombing film, Howard Emmett Rogers commented on his graying hair. "When I write pictures for you from now on I'll have to make you play the father of the girl instead of her lover," said Rogers. "Yeah. I know," Gable agreed. "From now on I'm going to run Lewis Stone out of Hollywood" . . . Former Collector of Internal Revenue Joe Higgins, who was defeated by Francis E. Rivers for the City Court judgeship, will give a party for his successful opponent, at the Grand St. Boys Club, December 18 . . . Lillian Hellman, author of "The North Star;" Louis Adamic, author of "Native Land," and Burnet Hershey, author of "Air Force," arrived in Toledo last week and were welcomed by the mayor and a committee. The committee rushed to the three leading bookshops to buy copies of the books, for autographing and auctioning for charity. None of the shops had any copies.

Dorothy Thompson was at a party with George Jean Nathan and told the drama expert: "I have the greatest play ever written, and want you to read it. It's the most important and most wonderful play of your lifetime." Nathan said that he was busy that week, but would be free to read it the following week . . . A few days later Nathan phoned Miss Thompson and asked her: "Well, where is the greatest and most wonderful play ever written in my lifetime?" . . . "Oh, I reread it," Dorothy shrugged, "and threw it into the waste basket."

Paul Stewart, the noted actor-director, has acquired the radio rights to "Barnaby," the comic strip . . . The Signal Corps made a movie of "Army Play-by-Play" before it closed . . . Helen Hayes' new dentist was bewildered at his first meeting with the star—who arrived with a quart of wine wrapped in a laundry bag, and a copy of Joe Mitchell's book "McSorley's Wonderful Saloon." Her luggage merely was an aftermath of her interview with Lucius Beebe, in the apartment of her friend, Nunnally Johnson. Nunnally left them alone, and told Beebe: "If you want a drink, just phone and charge it to Jed Harris." Beebe phoned downstairs, and ordered four quarts of wine. He presented one to Miss Hayes. The Mitchell book was a gift from Johnson.

Ernest Hemingway has grown a full beard . . . Mike Todd's production of Cole Porter's "Mexican Hayride" will cost $200,000. "And after that," Todd vows, "I'll put on my dream production" . . . A group of men who meet at the St. Regis Bar every day, call themselves "The Cirrhosis Club." They demand that before a new member can become eligible, he, like the rest of them, must have been operated upon for ulcers.

Nicaraguan Envoy Becomes Father of Son

For weeks the Nicaraguan Ambassador, Dr. Guillermo Sevilla Sacasa, has been saying "I am expecting my son almost any time now."

Well, his son has arrived, born on Friday at Georgetown Hospital.

Senora de Sacasa is the former Senorita Lillian Somoza, daughter of the President of Nicaragua and Senora de Somoza. The baby is President Somoza's first grandchild. Senora de Somoza has been in Washington for several weeks awaiting the birth of her grandchild.

The baby has been named Guillermo for his father.

Tea Party With a Purpose Is Planned at Md. Hospital

Annual Donation Day Fete Set for Saturday; Junior Auxiliary to Assist in Receiving

A number of Montgomery County, Md., residents are planning to drive out to the Montgomery County General Hospital in Sandy Spring next Saturday for the annual donation day tea.

For the last 22 years the event, sponsored by the women's board of the hospital, has attracted hundreds of persons who bring linens, home canned goods, tinned food, fresh fruits and vegetables and cash donations enough to help the institute for a year.

Although the fete is called a tea, Mrs. Eugene W. Scott of Manor Club Estates, serving her fourth term as president, says "We never serve tea because we have made ourselves famous for the special hot chocolate served with whipped cream." Prepared by Mrs. Lou Bussler, the chocolate is known throughout the county as "hospital chocolate." Coffee and cookies are also offered.

Last year's donation day brought more than $1000 in cash, 375 pieces of linen, more than 1700 quarts of home-canned goods, 384 glasses of jellies and preserves and nearly 1000 tins of food.

The tea will be held from 2 until 5 p. m. in the nurses' home. Guides will show guests through the hospital during the afternoon hours for visitors. Members of the junior auxiliary and hospital service unit will register guests and assist in receiving.

Assisting Mrs. Scott in receiving will be Miss Frances M. Leishear, Mrs. Mahlon Kirk 4th, Mrs. E. A. Merritt, Mrs. Ailliam John Thomas, Mrs. Francis Miller, Mrs. Milton H. Bancroft, Mrs. Roland Childs, Mrs. J. Albert Wilson and Miss Mabel E. Metz.

Also assisting in the dining room will be Mrs. Vestus Willcox, Mrs. Arthur W. Palmer, Mrs. Douglas Whitlock, Mrs. William Horne, Mrs. P. H. Royster, Mrs. Walter A. Covert, Mrs. Merhle Haines, Mrs. B. The Vogels On Holiday In New York

With their crops all in, the stock in good hands, Martin and Peggy Vogel, jr., have left their farm down at Warrenton, Va., and are on a two months' holiday in New York. They have taken an apartment on East Fifty-seventh st. where they will be joined by Mrs. Vogel's mother, Mrs. Effingham Townsend of Washington for the Christmas season.

Speaking of their well-earned vacation Mrs. Vogel said, "It's partly for fun, partly business. And anyway, it's the slack season on the farm."

While "Pete" Vogel is taking an agricultural course to increase his knowledge on farming, Peggy Vogel is shopping and seeing some of the Broadway hits. They have with them their 2-year-old son, Townsend, on his first trip to the big city and completely thrilled with it all. "I expect him to drop in at the Stork Club any day now," his mother said with a laugh.

The young Vogels are farming with a vengeance. Along with fruits and vegetables they have a prize herd of Black Angus cattle. An excellent horseman, Mr. Vogel also has a stable of thoroughbreds. His famous blue-ribbon, Demas, is vacationing for the duration now that there are so few horse shows to take part in.

Eugenia W. Cowper, William H. Lewis Wed at Gatesville

C., and Mr. Lewis, son of Mrs. Richard Lewis and the late Mr. Lewis of Broad Run and Warrenton, Va., were married at Gatesville, N. C., at an 11:30 morning ceremony on Thanksgiving Day, with the Rev. John Bonner officiating.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and was gowned in brown trimmed with butterfly sequins. She wore dark brown accessories, a Dutch hat and veil and her flowers were orchids.

Mrs. J. L. Hofler was the matron of honor and wore a gold-trimmed frock of light tan with dark brown accessories. Her flowers were yellow roses.

Gordon Lewis of Alexandria, Va., was the best man and the ushers were J. L. Hofler and Coleman Ellicott of Windsor, N. C.

The bride attended the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina, and the bridegroom attended VPI in Blacksburg, Va. The bride is a niece of Mrs. E. A. Smith of Warrenton, Va., and a greatniece of Gen. W. P. Roberts.

Delmar Has Voice of Great Power

By Ray C. B. Brown

Washington Music Teachers' Association meets in Phillips Memorial Gallery on Monday night. Guest artist: Rose Delmar; accompanist, Margaret Tolson. Program of songs by Bach, Rissi, Schubert, Brahms, Strauss, Massenet, Horsman Carpenter, Bridge and Dvorak.

Rose Delmare, Bohemian contralto, made her first professional appearance in this country last evening at a recital for members and guests of the Washington Music Teachers' Association in Phillips Memorial Gallery. Sound training and artistic experience were evident in her use of a voice unusual in range and remarkable for power. One understands that she was recovering from a laryngitis, and that would account for a tentative attack on her piano and mezzo-voce tones as well as for an unsteadiness in the timbre of all but full-voice passages. In fairness one must defer ultimate criticism until a more favorable occasion.

Beginning with Bach's lovely "Mein Jesu," she showed her command of style by turning to Rossi's taxing aria, "An, rendimi," with its wide compass of tessitura. The open high tones were brilliantly resonant and the low tones rich in color. A Schubert group combined the unfamiliar "An die Leier" with "Die Liebe hat gelogen" and "Rastlose Liebe." Her Brahms selections were "Nicht mehr zu Dir zu gehen" and "Mainacht," and there were two lieder by Strauss: "Befriet" and "Heimlicke Auffordrung."

From her opeartic repertoire she drew Charlotte's aria, "Des cris joyeux des enfants," from Massenet's "Werther." This was followed by Horsman's "Bird of the Wilderness," Carpenter's "When I Bring to You Colored Toys" and Frank Bridge's "Love Went A-Riding." As she was singing in English for the first time, one compliments her on her diction. A final group contained two seventeenth century pastourelles: "Lisette dormait" and "Paris est au roi," and two of Dvorak's gypsy songs, sung in Czech.

Minna Niemann gives a piano recital Monday afternoon in the Sulgrave Club. Program of compositions by Respighi, Schumann, Brahms, Chopin, Howe, Griffes, Rakhmaninov and Johann Strauss.

Minna Niemann had a friendly and responsive audience yesterday afternoon at her recital in the Sulgrave Club. A conscientious musician with a capable technical equipment, she plays with fluency and tinges her readings with poetic color. In her programs she usually strives to please varying tastes by the balance between old and new, and this one was no exception, for her first offering was six of Respighi's "Antique Dances and Airs for the Lute," which one does not recall having heard here before in the piano version.

These pieces are very interesting and effective arrangements of music from the 16th and 17th centuries. The "Balletto," for example, was composed by Giovanni Batista della Gostena, and the "Gagliarda" by Vincenzo Galilei. All the numbers have melodic charm in the Italiante manner, and particularly pleasing are the "Villanella" by an anonymous composer, and the "Siciliana." The most pretentious is a sturdy passacaglia of considerable difficulty.

In her second group, she combined Schumann's "Aurschwung," the E flat minor Intermezzo of Brahms, and two pieces by Chopin; the G sharp minor Etude and the Barcarolle. Two American composers led off the final group, Mary Howe being represented by her imaginative Prelude and Charles Griffes by "Clouds." Other items were Rakhmaninov's "Lilacs" and Edouard Schuett's paraphrase of the Johann Strauss waltz, "Rosen aus dem Sueden."
